McAdoo's Idea.
The Silver Puzzle.
Watch Russia-Japan.
No U. S. Cars for Russia.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

W. G. McADOO writes an extremely interesting book of memoirs, "Crowded Years," published by Houghton Mifflin Company.

Mr. McAdoo's years have been very crowded, particularly when he was running the United States Treasury and the railroads at the same time.

He suggests that there should be no talk of canceling foreign debts, and if France and Germany can't, or don't want to pay the money they owe, you might take colonies, "as part payment," NOT a good idea, France and England will say.

PRESIDENT HOOVER, Mr. Mellon and others that attend to our money affairs will be interested in part of a dispatch that Cyrus H. K. Curtis received from London yesterday, and printed in his newspapers:

"A silver mystery has arisen to puzzle the staid city of London.

"Since October 29, the value of silver has gone up 15 per cent in Shanghai, which means that the purchasing power of China and, to some extent, of India, has gone up almost overnight to a point which, if maintained, would be enough to help British and world industries onto their feet."

READERS OF THIS column will perhaps remember that, on October 25, four days before October 29, when the sudden rise in silver began, information was supplied here as follows:

"Some high-spirited American speculators, said to have been heavy short sellers of silver on the New York Metals Exchange, would 'cover' that dangerous short selling, if they were to investigate and understand conditions in the East."

The speculators that went short of silver and have not covered are in serious danger. India and China that were sellers in silver are buying, and refuse to sell. Germany and Japan are buying silver. Silver production all over the world, because of the copper situation, is at its lowest ebb.

A REAL WAR might come between Japan and Russia. If it did, Japan and Russia both would need enormous quantities of silver. Those that went short on the metal in New York at 30 cents an ounce might have to pay a dollar for every ounce sold.

Japan has left $75,000,000 in gold in San Francisco. Some of it is to buy ingredients for explosives. More of it is to buy silver metal, the only kind of money that can be used during a war in the East.

Washington and France, having monopolized the world's gold supply, totally inadequate anyhow, may find the world getting along without gold.

THE QUESTION of the hour, for Europe and the East, is this:

"Will Russia allow the Japanese to establish themselves in Manchuria, as dictators now, owners and rulers later?"

Will Russia be willing to have eventually, a population of fifty million Japanese along the Russian border of northeastern China?

The powerful Manchu dynasty, that came to an end with the beginning of the Chinese Republic, came down from Manchuria, a wonderfully desirable country, from the Japanese point of view, in spite of its hot summers and its intensely cold winters.

BUT A JAPANESE empire, stretching along west of the Manchurian border, would be something different. The Czar once fought with the Japanese about Manchuria, you remember, and got his beating.

The present government of Russia is more powerful, and if a Russo-Japanese war comes again, it will be a different war.

The possibility of this war, causing the refusal of Russia to sell wheat that she may need for her soldiers, has started the wheat boom, although some of the grain gamblers don't know it.

ROOSEVELT, ACTING as arbitrator, gave to Japan the Russian possessions in Southern Manchuria after the war of 1904, and Japan since then has spent more than $200,000,000 in Manchuria.

If Russia tries to get back what Roosevelt's decision took away from her, it will be a severe fight. May we, with the help of Providence, keep out of it, minding our own business, as Japan minded her business during the big war.

RUSSIA TRIED to buy 9,000 railway freight cars and some other transportation materials, at a cost of $50,000,000, here. Our businessmen did not feel like trusting the Russians and demanded half cash in advance, so the business has gone to Germany.

Perhaps that will help Germany to pay private debts owed to our financiers, in a hurry to make commissions, and not paying much attention to repayment of principal.

GANDHI, HAVING seen the king, speaks kindly of him, but, asked whether the king had given "any hope for Indian independence," Gandhi, lifting his eyes to heaven, replied:

"Only God gives encouragement, not kings."

Inhalator Battle Starts As Meter Reader Finds Produce Dealer in Auto

Police emergency squads and rescue crews of the Duquesne Light Company, with inhalators, battled for hours today in an effort to save the life of Elmer D. Truitt, 40, produce man, of 218 Hornaday road, Carrick, found unconscious from carbon monoxide in his garage.

Truitt was found seated in his car, with the engine running and garage doors closed, by a meter reader attracted by exhaust gas issuing from the doors about 8 a. m.

Members of Truitt's family said he had gone to the garage about 2 a. m. to make an early start for the produce yards.

RUSSIANS FIGHT WITH CHINESE

By EDWARD HUNTER
International News Service

MUKDEN, Nov. 7.—Russian soldiers fought with the Chinese army which was defeated by the Japanese at the Nonni River, Japanese military headquarters here charged today.

Military dispatches from the Japanese advance base at Tahsing, north of the river and 20 miles south of Tsitsihar, said bodies of Russians, in uniform, were found lying on the battlefield as the Japanese moved forward in pursuit of the retreating Heilungkiang army of Gen. Ma Chan-Shan.

Previous charges have been made by the Japanese authorities here that Ma Chan-Shan was under Soviet influence, and had been receiving arms and ammunition from Siberia, where a Russian army is massed opposite the Manchurian border city of Manchuli.

Gloria's Secret Wedding Brings Bigamy Threat

International News Service.

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 7.—Legal aspects of Gloria Swanson's secret marriage to Michael Farmer, Irish sportsman in New York August 16 was a matter that caused wide speculation in the motion picture colony today.

The wedding, it was revealed, took place in the summer home of Dudley Field Malone, noted lawyer, at Elmsford, N. Y., with Mayor John E. Murray officiating.

Both the actress and Farmer apparently had vanished. They were reported to be in several places in California.

Miss Swanson was not scheduled to get her interlocutory decree of divorce from the Marquis Henri de la Falaise until next Monday, and until that time she is not free under California law to wed again.

However, there will be no prosecution on the part of Los Angeles County, District Attorney Buron Fitts stated this morning.

That is a matter that concerns New York authorities, where Miss Swanson was married, and not California, according to Fitts.

FRIENDS NOT TOLD

It was learned that Miss Swanson concealed her marriage from her closest friends.

Superior Judge Emmett H. Wilson in a definition said that the marriage of a person whose interlocutory divorce decree has not become final is regarded as bigamy under California statutes. Judge Wilson said:

"If the offender returns to live here he can be prosecuted under California law, but if the offender does return here and does not live with the other party to the marriage, no California law is violated."

PITT, TECH SET FOR CLASH

By JESS CARVER

Pitt and Tech clash in the Stadium today in the eighteenth renewal of their gridiron series, guaranteeing a pip of a football game, come rain, snow, sleet or high water.

Today attendance figures are not calculated to approach those of other years, but, given a fair break in the weather and a good eleventh-hour sale, a turnout of 25,000 persons may witness the struggle which will decide the city college championship.

TECH SEEKS STUDENTS' RELEASE

Police Oppose Freedom of 117 Youths Arrested in Brawl; Hearing Monday

One hundred and seventeen Carnegie Tech students and graduates, arraigned in Morals Court today following a battle with police and firemen near the Tech dormitories shortly after midnight, were held over for a further hearing Monday.

Arthur W. Tarbell, dean of men, was closeted with attorneys of Reed, Shaw, Smith & McClay at 11 a. m., seeking some means of getting the boys out of jail in time for this afternoon's game between Pitt and Tech, celebration of which led to the arrests.

RELEASE OPPOSED

The boys were held over at the request of Inspector James Hoey of the Oakland district, who said:

"These boys were hurling bricks, bottles and chunks of iron from the third floor of their dormiteries.

"Many of these objects were so big they might have killed the police or firemen there.

"This thing happens every year before the Pitt-Tech game. Last year we arrested a lot of the boys and then released them so they could see the game.

"We thought that would be a

LOCOMOTIVE UPSET NEAR JOHNSTOWN STATION

Four Trainmen Hurt, All Passengers Escape, Four Main Line Tracks Blocked

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., Nov. 7.—The giant locomotive pulling the Lehigh Valley Express train of the Pennsylvania Railroad turned over in the Morrellville yards here this morning as it was nearing the Johnstown station, injuring four men, including the engine crew. Four tracks were blocked.

As the engine turned over, the couplings connecting it with the baggage car snapped, releasing the latter, which held to the tracks. None of the passenger coaches was derailed and no passenger was injured.

The injured trainmen were taken to Memorial Hospital here.

Witnesses said the train was running eastbound at slow speed about three-quarters of a mile from the station at the time. The low speed was believed to have prevented a more serious accident.

The express, made up in Pittsburgh, was due in Johnstown at 10:48 a. m.

PINCHOT SCORED ON JOB CAMPS

By DAVID ROSENTHAL
Staff Correspondent.

CONNELLSVILLE, Pa., Nov. 7.—Pennsylvania National Guardsmen today were erecting the first of Gov. Pinchot's tented cities at Frogtown, between Normalville and Indian Head, to house the state's unemployed men who will be given work on road projects in spite of the protests in Bentleyville and Charleroi.

Six motor truckloads of equipment, in charge of Col. William L. Hicks, superintendent of the Mt. Gretna Military Reservation, arrived at Frogtown last night. They started to erect 30 tents today as Col. Hicks left for Washington County to select a location for the second tented city near Bentleyville.

Protesting against the importation of unemployed men from districts outside of this immediate territory, business and civic leaders in Bentleyville and Charleroi declared that hundreds of men, living in comfortable homes and with all requisites to normal home life and proper sanitation, are without work in this section.

3 BANKS PAY ON DEC. 14

Announcement that depositors of three closed state banks will receive initial dividends on December 14, through the efforts of Dr. William D. Gordon, state Secretary of Banking, was taken in Pittsburgh today as a guarantee of Gordon's promise to free some of the $53,000,000 in the 37 closed state institutions in Western Pennsylvania before Christmas.

Setting a date for the payment of the first dividends since the closing of a number of banks in the district climaxed a busy day yesterday, in which Gordon's proposed realization corporation for the district was completed and a private banker to handle distribution of dividends was named.

Another development of the day was Gordon's admission that he is interesting himself in transactions of public officials with the closed institutions.

THREE BANKS TO PAY

The dividends, announced by Gordon as he left Pittsburgh last night, will be distributed among depositors in the Hamilton State Bank, the Perry State Bank and

Girl, 13, Freed From Prison In Home After 4 Years

Washington, Nov. 7.—(AP.)—Thirteen-year-old Edith Riley is free from a windowless closet prison in her parents' home for the first time in four years. When removed yesterday by police she weighed 38 pounds.

Her father and stepmother, Mr. and Mrs. Lester N. Riley, are charged with cruelty. They were arrested and released in bonds of $1,000 each.

The child, said by doctors to be five years old in physical development, is in a hospital where she is being fed.

When Policewoman Ruby G. Brandt searched the Riley home, she said she found Edith crouched on the floor of a dark closet. When removed to lighted quarters, the child could see with difficulty and was barely articulate. She had been fed little but liquid foods.

The father's only reply to police questioning was that the child had bad habits and had to be locked up. He is 49 years old and a plasterer.

When the emaciated child was removed to a hospital she was examined by physicians who prescribed solid food. Edith ate a large meal of meat, vegetables and eggs, which she seemed to enjoy.

Pershing's Son Made Warren Estate Heir

CHEYENNE, Wyo., Nov. 7.—(AP.)—An order permitting distribution of the estate of the late United States Senator Francis E. Warren, of Wyoming, has been signed by District Judge Sam M. Thompson. Appraisers have valued the estate at $819,255.92, John W. Lacey, an attorney said.

After smaller bequests are deducted the bulk of the estate will be divided equally among a grandson, Francis Warren Pershing, son of Gen. John J. Pershing; a son, Fred E. Warren, and the widow, Clara Morgan Warren.

Bandits Robbing Barbecue Take Owner for Walk

One of two Negro highwaymen took G. W. Smith, 55, proprietor of the Cool Springs Barbecue on the Campbell Run road, near Carnegie, for a walk early today while the other looted his place, he reported.

According to Smith, he was alone in the barbecue when one of the pair entered and purchased a package of cigarets. As he turned toward the cash register, he said, the other stepped through the door with a drawn revolver and ordered him to throw up his hands. He told police he was forced to accompany one of the Negroes about 30 yards down the highway, where he was told to keep on walking and not look back.

He returned to the establishment a short time later to find the men gone and the place ransacked.

WABASH BRIDGE TOO LOW, ENGINEER SEES REPLACEMENT

$2,129,000 JOB FOR COUNTY FORECAST

Government Might Not Ask Action for 10 Years, Says Grand Jury Quiz Witness

The Wabash Bridge is lower than the government requirements for bridges over navigable streams and may have to be replaced, C. S. Davis, engineer, testified today before the grand jury rehearing of the proposed acquisition by the county of the bridge and tunnel for a traffic outlet.

Davis, called by opponents of the project, testified he didn't think there was much likelihood of the government ordering the bridge elevated for 10 years. He said that in his judgment it would cost $2,129,000 to reproduce a bridge and tunnel to meet the requirements of highway traffic.

PLANNERS IGNORED

James B. Sansom, secretary of the County Planning Commission, testified the bridge and tunnel project has never been formally presented to the commission by the County Commissioners, and that the first copy of the resolution adopted by the Commissioners for purchase of the span was received Thursday.

U. N. Arthur, chief engineer of the Department of City Planning, and Frederick Bigger, chairman of the Citizens' Committee on City Plan, declared at last night's session that the use of the Wabash property to bring automobile traffic into the downtown triangle would be a serious mistake.

Attorney Louis Caplan, representing Newton F. Hopkins, protesting taxpayer, brought his first witnesses forward in the person of the planning experts. He expects to call a number of engineers today. Further testimony may then be heard from the county and railroad witnesses, after which the grand jury will go into secret session. They must reach a decision before midnight tonight.

INSPECT PROPERTY

The County Planning Commission, in the meantime, had directed seven questions to the County Commissioners, nearly all of which were touched upon in yesterday's testimony. This morning the county planners will make an inspection of the Wabash property.

The observations of Bigger regarding traffic movements and proposed improvements called forth the ire of County Commissioner Joseph G. Armstrong, who interrupted the grand jury proceedings to say:

"I was chairman of your Planning Commission from 1918 to 1922. It's practical engineering that counts in these things, not theory."

Bigger had explained that the Citizens' Committee on City Plan was against even a new bridge and tunnel at Perry street for the reason that it would dump a large volume of traffic into the congested area of the Triangle in the neighborhood of Liberty and Fourth avenues.

ALTERNATE PLANS

An improved approach to the south end of the Liberty Tubes and the completion of a by-pass by way of the Sawmill Run valley and the West End-North Side Bridge would greatly relieve congestion in the tubes, he declared.

Mr. Arthur declared that congestion at intersections at the north and south portals of the Liberty Tubes is largely responsible for their crowded condition. No other traffic tunnel should be built into the heart of the Triangle, he said. He favored the construction of belt line boulevards to carry traffic around the downtown area, rather than through it, he said.

"Belt lines would be built before long unless all the money is wasted on projects that don't help the situation."

DEFENDS PROJECT

H. H. Temple, chief engineer of the Pittsburgh and West Virginia Railroad, answered a number of the questions that were put to County Commissioners by the County Planning Commission. To the report that the tunnel started to collapse about 18 months ago, he said the entire trouble was a rock slide which started along the Pennsylvania Railroad and later partly crushed the north portal of the Wabash tunnel. The portal was rebuilt, he said.

The County Commissioners presented a united front in their testimony yesterday. All declared that they believe the purchase of the Wabash project is necessary to relieve congestion in the Liberty Tubes and give the South Hills improved access to downtown.

lesson to them. It hasn't been.

"I want them kept in jail long enough to miss the game as part of their punishment.

"I expect charges will be preferred against some of them.

"We can't permit their fun to get out of bounds that it endangers the public and our officers."

Dean Tarbell told Magistrate Thomas D. Jones that many innocent boys had been arrested, including several graduates who had returned for the game and were staying in the dormitory for the night.

FIREMEN CALLED

The trouble started when firemen answered a still alarm in Woodlawn avenue where three bon fires had been started near Scobell and Boss halls, dormitories.

Police Capt. John Barry testified that when he arrived students were hurling missiles from the second and third floors of the halls at the firemen.

Barry said that the students shouted defiance to him and dared him to come in and arrest them.

Fifteen patrolmen from the Oakland station accepted the defi and stormed into the dormitories dragging the students into patrol wagons.

FLOOD STATION

At the Oakland station, the students ripped down a water line in the cell room flooding the station. They then were transferred to Central station, where they still languished at noon.

3 Autos Destroyed In North Side Fire

you were to ask the Japanese, now dropping bombs here and there on the Chinese, you would be told that airplanes and bombs also can give encouragement, and DISCOURAGEMENT.

THE DEMOCRATIC political situation is about this:

Many rank and file Democrats think that Gov. Roosevelt, of New York, will be nominated, and they want him nominated.

A considerable number of able politicians, who know what they want and usually get it, don't want, and don't intend to have Gov. Roosevelt nominated.

The sort of opposition that defeated Champ Clark, and gave the White House to Woodrow Wilson, is now arranging to defeat Gov. Roosevelt, and nominate somebody else.

A two-thirds vote in the Democratic convention would make it difficult for [illegible] rank and file to carry out their will, even if they really had a will of their own.

IN AN AIRPLANE crash, on Thursday, five were burned alive, and when the plane landed badly an explosion followed.

The Diesel engine will make such conflagrations and explosions impossible. And the Diesel engine will soon be perfected, for airplane use, for automobile use also, probably, and certainly to supply power on farms, and in small communities, making the running of long power lines unnecessary.

It would pay the government to help develop the Diesel engine and hasten its perfection, but unfortunately, we know, and admit, that our government is only good to BUY things, not intelligent enough to develop or manage them.

CARAWAY DIES UNEXPECTEDLY IN HOSPITAL

Heart Attack Kills Senator After Operation; Figure In Many Political Feuds

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Nov. 7.—(AP.)—Arkansas's fiery junior Senator, Thaddeus H. Caraway, lost his final fight—that against death—last night.

The 60-year-old Democrat died unexpectedly at a time when medical attendants considered him almost recovered from an operation he underwent October 29. The cause was the closing of arteries that feed the muscles of the heart.

His career was marked by hot disputes and stormy crusades, the latest of which involved a spectacular attack upon President Hoover's economic relief program. Caraway wished it liberalized and, with Senator Robinson, Democratic leader, organized a fight to that end.

Caraway demanded loans be made to farmers to buy food for their families as well as for their livestock. The administration contended support of humans was a Red Cross function. The fight raged for weeks. Then it ended in a legislative compromise by which the Red Cross agreed to raise $10,000,000 to feed drought sufferers.

The Senator, however, continued to attack the administration relief policies and had promised to bring the question before the next Congress.

He was possessed of a quick wit and sarcastic tongue that kept him much before the public and made him feared as an adversary in rough and tumble debate. Once, during his senatorial career, his fighting nature led him into a physical encounter with a Veteran's Bureau employe.

At another time, a vocal controversy with Representative Cramton, Michigan Republican, led him to telephone Cramton and invite him to fight. The Representative ignored the challenge.

U.S. BUDGET CUT 350 MILLIONS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7.—(AP.)—Executive departments of the government will have at least $350,000,000 less to spend during the next fiscal year than they had expected.

Making his first public announcement of the extent to which curtailment of 1933 budgets had gone, President Hoover figured this would permit a drop of between $280,000,000 and $300,000,000 in the total submitted to Congress, as compared with the last.

The 1932 budget called for $3,932,642,411. The Chief Executive's estimate places the figures which will be sent to the coming Congress at $3,632,642,111. There is little likelihood the $350,000,000 will wash away the deficit which has accumulated this year.

It has grown to more than $661,000,000 with only a third of the fiscal year over. At its present rate of expansion, it would be close to $2,000,000,000 before July 1, 1932.

In addition, there is the $93,000,000 on the wrong side of the Treasury ledger from the last fiscal year.

3 BANKS TO PAY DEPOSITORS DEC. 14

the McGillick Savings & Trust Company. Dividends in other institutions will follow shortly, it is understood.

Depositors in the Hamilton bank will receive 10 per cent on their deposits; in the Perry bank, depositors will receive 15 per cent; in the McGillick company, 5 per cent. The payments represent distribution of cash on hand, will not decrease the percentage eventually paid by the institutions, Gordon says.

Proofs of deposit will be started within a few days; 30 days must elapse before payment can be made.

M'CUNE PRIVATE BANKER

Charles L. McCune was named by Gordon yesterday as the private banker through whom all cash will clear as it is paid out. He will "buy" the bank's cash for "$1 and other valuable considerations," distributing it among depositors in exchange for their receipts for the percentage of their deposits he pays. The method involves a saving of several months' time, Gordon says, in making initial payments.

The directorate of the Second District Realization Corporation, as it will be called, including leading financiers, merchants and industrialists of the Pittsburgh district, was announced last night as the series of conferences held by Gordon and Vice President James C. Chaplin, of the Pittsburgh Clearing House Association with other banking and business leaders drew to a close.

POWERFUL SUPPORT

Gordon will act as chairman, he says, on a board numbering among its members representatives of the powerful Mellon banking group, the Hillman interests and a leading independent bank, the Colonial Trust Company.

Chaplin, in addition to his office as active head of the Clearing House, is president of the Colonial Company. A. C. Robinson is president of the Peoples-Pittsburgh Trust Company, leader of the Hillman banks. Sidney S. Liggett, vice president of the Union Trust Company, represents the Mellon interests.

Credit for securing the support of the Hillman and Mellon groups, without which Gordon's realization corporation would be weak, is given to Chaplin.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS

Personnel of the directorate, in addition to Gordon, Chaplin, Robinson and Liggett, has been announced as including Howard Irish, president of the Commonwealth Trust Company; Edgar J. Kaufmann, president of Kaufmann's; H. Lee Mason, Jr., president of the J. R. Weldin Company; Frank A. Merrick, president of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company; Malcolm McGiffin, president of the Fidelity Trust Company; Frank R. Phillips, president of the Philadelphia Company; William B. Purvis, vice president of the Butler Savings and Trust Company; Walter Rosenbaum, president of Rosenbaum's, and George C. Watt, president of the Braddock Trust Company.

Directors will not be paid.

The realization corporation will act as a central liquidating agency for sale of assets held by the closed banks. It is hoped that through its activities depression of the security market by a sudden flood of stocks and bonds held by the 37 institutions in Western Pennsylvania or glutting of the real estate market by forced sales can be avoided.

Washington Trust Re-Opening Planned

The Washington Trust Company, of Washington, Pa., which closed its doors early in October, may be reopened within 30 days if plans now under consideration by directors of the institution are successful.

Efforts are understood to have been made to obtain new capital from eastern bankers. The bank did not deplete its reserve before closing, as directors took action to protect stockholders.

Bottle Collector Gets $10 Instead of Jail Term

William Fears and his family today are enjoying the fruits of his labor, at their home, 1927 Webster avenue, instead of the husband and father being a prisoner in the county jail. For his labor Fears got $10, and the Allegheny County Bottle Exchange which had brought suit against him, has 2,000 bottles which he collected along the new Allegheny River boulevard, and carted in a baby carriage to his home.

While working on the boulevard Job Fears noticed workmen, after emptying milk bottles at lunch, tossed the bottles over the hillside. When he lost his job, he took the baby carriage, collected the bottles and took them to his home. He was told they were worth 75 cents a hundred.

When he attempted to sell them the Bottle Exchange brought suit before Alderman Ray Schneider, it being illegal to sell registered bottles. The circumstances were explained at the hearing and the Exchange ended the case by sending a truck for the bottles and giving Fears $10.

Avalon Ponders Over Home For New Fire Truck

Housing for their new $10,250 fire truck presents a problem to the Borough Council of Avalon, which met last night. Now that they have the truck, the question is "Where shall we put it?" The present fire house is inadequate, it was found. The door is too small and the street is too narrow. When the fire alarm sounds, much juggling to and fro is required on the part of the driver before the truck is on its way.

Now Council is considering building a new fire house. The only alternative is enlarging the door and widening the street. The cost of a new house is estimated at $3,500. Charles Newell, president of Council, became chagrinned when the matter was brought up at last night's meeting. He said:

"D'ya know what they were buying when they got that truck? Now they're in a fix."

'BOSSY' MAYOR IN JOHNSTOWN SET FOR WAR

Swaggering Ex-Pugilist Says 'Bet on Me' As He Plans Flood to Wipe Out Graft

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., Nov. 7.—An undersized, stocky, red-headed Irishman who used to be a prizefighter is Johnstown's next Mayor.

He walks with a swagger, he splits infinitives, he was laughed at when he announced for office, but today the citizens were pointing him out as the super-"Bossy" Gillis—the man who will put the Flood City back on Page One.

His name is Eddie McCloskey. He is 41. He likes to follow the ponies and bet a few dollars on the cards. He doesn't drink but he's against prohibition.

BOASTS OF CHILDREN

He has three children. And if he isn't telling you that his 14-year-old son, Eddie, Jr., will some day be the best boxer in the world, he's telling you that his youngest daughter, Catherine, 4, is a swell acrobat—or that his oldest daughter, Irene, 6, can already play the cornet.

The final returns certified him as the next Mayor. Of the 14,000 votes cast he received 8,000. He defeated the incumbent, Mayor Webster Saylor, an intelligent, honest citizen.

Organization? He had no organization. He simply announced he was going to run. He wanted the Republican nomination—but lost it by a small margin. But he was nominated on four other tickets—Democratic, Socialist, Labor and Prohibition.

Neither of Johnstown's two newspapers paid much attention to Eddie when he announced his candidacy. But a third publication did—The Derby—which is Eddie's own organ.

And thereby hangs the tale.

EDDIE DISGUSTED

Five years ago Eddie became disgusted with things. He'd spent the day and most of the night pressing pants in his cleaning and pressing shop, then he'd drop around the corner to play a few hands of poker—or watch the boys rattling the dice.

Well, the "joint" was raided twice. Eddie was arrested, along with the others. But, unlike the others, he gave his own name—and rather loudly. He squawked about the powers that were shutting up some gambling joints and permitting others to run.

So he started "The Derby"—a tabloid sheet of four pages published every now and then. He complained vociferously in print about "protected joints."

The people began to read "The Derby" (free to the people) and laugh. But Eddie became serious. He branched out into politics generally. He began publishing names and places. Everywhere he looked in the city and county governments he seemed to find graft.

ACCUSES POLITICIANS

He took the well-pressed suits out of his display window and dropped in several pieces of pipe and a small boulder. The pipe, according to Eddie's signs, was rotten and had been dug up from city jobs given political contractors. The boulder, so Eddie explained, was allowed to drop into a city sewer from the gas company's outlet.

Eddie harped on the utilities in "The Derby." The gas bills were terrible, the electric light charges were astounding, the water rates were terrific, to listen to Editor McCloskey.

And the people began to look for his throwaway sheet. The grammar of "The Derby" may have been as terrible as the gas bills, the nouns and verbs may have been missing from most of his sentences, but the good old adjectives were right in there full of punch.

SEES ANOTHER FLOOD

And today, by one of those freakish events which occur every so often in politics, Eddie finds himself Mayor. Listen to him:

"And I didn't make a promise. I don't owe a thing. My campaign cost me a couple o' hundred dollars. I didn't have no organization, and Council isn't with me, but I don't want 'em. That's what makes graft—when everything runs smooth. If we're against each other nobody'll cheat.

"I'm against the saloon and I'm against prohibition. Beer and light wines, I think. But the alley bootlegger has got to get—and I'm telling 'em now. They're the boys—these alley bootleggers—that pay the protection—and that's out. I've got nothing against them fraternal clubs—the Eagles, the Elks, the Owls—that have clubs. Let 'em go. And I'd be in favor of betting on the horses if the state got a tax. But them alley bootleggers are out.

"There's gonna be another flood in this town but it's gonna be a flood that'll wipe out the graft. You can bet on me, boy, there'll be no graft with me in there—I'll find 'em out."

Akron to Fly Here On Armistice Day

Weather permitting, the dirigible Akron will fly over Pittsburgh Armistice Day, Senator David A. Reed yesterday telegraphed John Vachetta, secretary of the Federation of War Veterans Societies of Allegheny County.

The Senator was asked by Vachetta two weeks ago to intercede with Navy officials and request that the ship be flown over Pittsburgh.

Ford 'Cupid' Unknowingly To Indian Pair

FORT MYERS, Fla., Nov. 7.—(AP.)—From out of the everglades came news today of a romance among the Seminole Indians which Henry Ford unwittingly fostered and which culminated in the wedding of Lena Cypress, 17, and Richard Osceola, 25.

They were married at the full of the moon, in keeping with Seminole custom.

Richard and Lena's brother, Johnny, long have been friends. He had known Lena, too, since she was a papoose, but only for the last year had he courted seriously in the Seminole fashion.

Richard was afforded an excellent opportunity to press his suit early this year when he and Johnny Cypress went into the everglades with W. Stanley Hanson, "white medicine man," in search of Seminole curiosities for Ford's museum.

Frequently the party returned to Johnny's home to permit him to visit his family and this gave Richard the chance to woo the little Indian maiden.

Hanson learned today of the culmination of the romance from a Seminole who came to Fort Myers. Seminole custom requires a wouldbe bridegroom to plead with the girl's mother for the hand of the prospective wife. The father has nothing whatever to say in the matter.

WATER BARGAIN DEFENDED BY WALDSCHMIDT

Contract Only Solution, Solicitor Asserts After Charge of $400,000 Cost

City Solicitor Charles A. Waldschmidt today was preparing to investigate the status of a contract between the city and the South Pittsburgh Water Company, following charges by the Chamber of Commerce that the agreemnt was illegal.

The Chamber, in a resolution, charged the method by which the city pays from its treasury the difference between the city water rates and the higher rates of the South Pittsburgh Water Company will cost the taxpayers approximately $460,000 for 1932.

Waldschmidt, in a preliminary statement, said he could see no reason why the contract might be illegal, declaring:

"I haven't had an opportunity to go into the matter thoroughly, but I presume Council will ask me to do so next week. However, the Supreme Court, in a decision provided that the city cannot run parallel lines along those of the South Pittsburgh Company. These people in the South Hills sections had to have water, so the contract was the only thing we could devise."

RALPH CAPONE ENTERS U. S. PRISON

Leavenworth Doors Clang On Tax Dodger Who Waits His Brother Al's Arrival

LEAVENWORTH, Kan., Nov. 7.—(AP.)—Ralph Capone, Chicago's "Public Enemy No. 3," was committed today to Leavenworth federal prison, where his brother, "Scarface Al," is expected soon to begin serving a 10-year sentence.

Ralph, the elder brother of the gang overlord, is under a three-year sentence for income tax evasion, the offense that caused the overthrow of Al and others of the Capone dynasty of the underworld.

The irritation displayed by Ralph when he departed from Chicago last night in a special railroad car with a batch of "small fry" convicts, faded as he reached the end of his journey. He joked with newspaper men, his guards and the other prisoners, saying:

"It's been a very enjoyable trip down here, but I think it will be much more enjoyable going back."

Of newspaper reporters and photographers, he said:

"It's much easier to evade the income tax."

There was an apprehensive light in his eyes, however, as the railroad car was shunted through a gate of the big prison.

If he makes a good record in prison, he will be eligible for parole after two years and five months.

First Bob-Hair Bandit Finds WorldChanged

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—(INS.)—She wore the same shoes and stockings that she wore when she went away to prison seven and a half years ago.

But Celia Cooney, the first "bobbed-haired bandit," stepping from a train into New York's fanfare yesterday, found everything different. She exclaimed:

"That building!"

A reporter's eyes followed her pointed finger to the tip of the Empire State Building, and Celia said:

"It wasn't there when I went away."

Celia was released from Auburn Prison, rushed to Syracuse, and then put aboard a New York Central train for New York. Her release from Auburn, with three years off for good behavior, marked the completion of her punishment for engaging in banditry with her husband in a series of crimes in 1924.

Up at the One Hundred Twenty-fifth street station, her husband, Edward, also just out of prison, waited with a package under his arm—flowers, perhaps. But Celia rode by, huddled down in the plush seat, afraid to get off because she didn't know what door to use.

At the Grand Central Station a reporter met her. Still Celia was fearful, for her parole will end should she give out an interview.

She could not, however, repress the exclamations that the Empire State Building aroused. She could not repress the joy that the women strolling along Fifth avenue, wore dark hose, remarking:

DEPOSED BOSS DENIES ACTS OF REPRISAL

Satisfied With Outcome of Election, He Declares, But Hopes For Victory in 1933

Louis Volpe, brother of John Volpe, Republican leader in the Westinghouse Valley, was under arrest today in connection with the stoning of two stores and a home in Wilmerding following the victory of Independent voters there Tuesday.

Denying that he knew anything of the smashing of windows in the home of Milos Milasinovich, Shaw avenue, Wilmerding, and in his barbershop in Watkins avenue, and the grocery store of his father-in-law Theodore Ulzac, Watkins avenue, Wilmerding, Volpe posted $2,000 bail for a hearing before Justice of the Peace William A. Thompson, of Bellevue.

WOMAN ACCUSES VOLPE

Milasinovich's wife signed informations in which she said that Volpe had threatened her before the primary elections because she would not support Volpe's brother's borough ticket. John Volpe, who said he has started an investigation of the stoning, declared his brother is innocent.

Other informations were signed by Ulzac and his son-in-law. Volpe is charged with malicious mischief and surety of the peace. The arrest was made by Constable Edward Stokes.

John Volpe said he is unable to understand the smashing of the windows, and he denied that the occurrence was a reprisal because of his defeat at the polls. He said he is satisfied with the outcome of the elections, and that if the Independents do not prove beneficial to the residents of the borough during the next two years he will attempt to again secure the leadership of Wilmerding affairs at the election two years from now.

CLEANUP DRIVE PUSHED

Independent leaders declared that the arrest of Louis Volpe was another step in their effort to clean up general conditions in Wilmerding, and to break up intimidation of voters. They characterized the smashing of the windows as a reprisal for the failure of Ulzac and his family to support the Volpes politically.

State police, stationed in the borough since the attack on the Ulzac store, continued to patrol the borough today. It was said that they would remain in Wilmerding until election excitement had subsided.

MINISTER HELD AS ROBBER

FORTY WAYNE, Ind., Nov. 7.—(INS.)—Suffering from serious bullet wounds, the Rev. Orville C. Rutledge, 39, an evangelist of Vanwert, O., was under arrest today charged with attempting to rob a filling station.

Two detectives shot the evangelist twice when he refused to surrender when they said they caught him in the act of holding up a gasoline station last night. He was armed with a revolver, police said.

The minister explained that the depression had cut down his income from the pulpit and he had to get some money some way, his captors declared.

Rutledge had been a minister in Vanwert for nearly 15 years, he said.

ROME, Nov. 7.—(INS.)—To increase the birth rate in Rome, the municipal authorities today announced a series of awards for the parents who have the largest number of children during a five-year period beginning in January, 1932.

Only married couples who already have at least three children and whose annual income is $1,000 or less will be permitted to enter the competition.

Among the prizes will be small houses or apartments which will eventually become the property of the winners.

WOMAN KILLED BY AUTO

Mrs. Elizabeth Bell, 65, of 106 Brosville street, was killed last night when struck by an automobile at Terminal way and Carson street. Louis Denardo, of 512 California avenue, who police say was the driver, said the woman was struck when he swerved his machine to avoid hitting another. Denardo was held for the coroner.

F. J. Icory, 74, of 1440 Columbus avenue, suffered a fractured right leg when struck by an automobile said to have been driven by Clyde Keith, of 4 South street. Crossing Bennett street, near Tokio, Joseph Stagnoletta, 35, of 8124 Frankstown avenue, suffered a probable fracture of the skull. Police said Paul Hilty, 31, of Apollo, was the driver. Back injuries were received by Lawrence Bittner, of 2438 Cobden street, South Side, when the machine he was driving was rammed by another at Carson and South Thirtieth streets. The driver of the other failed to stop.

HOOVER UPHELD IN NAVY QUIZ

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7.—(INS.)—President Hoover, sometime today, will receive an official report vindicating him of the Navy League charge he has sought "at every turn, to restrict, to reduce and to starve the United States Navy."

The report will come from the committee of five he appointed and specifically instructed for that purpose.

This committee, headed by Chairman John Hays Hammond, the millionaire mining engineer, had finished drafting the rebuttal.

By a 7-to-1 vote, the Executive Committee of the Navy League has renewed the Gardner charges.

A report was circulated yesterday that the White House would have a "devastating and sensational" statement to make concerning the Navy League "within the next 48 hours." The regular Friday press conference passed without issuance of such a statement.

SCHOOL EDITOR SUSPENDED

GREENCASTLE, Ind., Nov. 7.—(AP.)—The board of control for The Depauw, campus publication at Depauw University, this afternoon suspended Thoburn Wiant, student editor, because of a recent article severely criticising Katherine Alvord, dean of women.

Wiant, a senior, is the son of the Rev. W. W. Wiant, pastor of North M. E. Church, Indianapolis, who is active in Depauw affairs.

The article urged the dismissal of Dean Alvord for her "incompetency, inability to exert the slightest positive influence on women students and her total lack of capacity to understand and help women placed under her authority."

It was written by Ben Deming, Fort Worth (Tex.), student, who is not a member of The Depauw staff. It was carried under the headings of "Student Opinion."

Nudist Cult Quits Town Because of Peeping Toms

CARMEL, Cal., Nov. 7.—(AP.)—Publicity given a nudist cult's request for quarters in Carmel has cost this town one nudist cult.

Mme. Mathilde Baumgartner, the cult's mentor, announced today the nudists will flee Carmel for an unannounced destination. She complained:

"We have been made ridiculous. Our purposes have been wrongly interpreted. We have become the joke of ignorant persons. We have been bothered by curiosity seekers. We have been hampered by peeping toms."

The city council, she said, violated a confidence when it made public her letter asking permission to bring the cult's headquarters, located just outside of Carmel, into the city limits.

Innovation Aids Concentration On Speaker

Services at Trinity Cathedral, Sixth avenue, are being conducted "in the dark." The Very Rev. N. R. High Moor, dean of Trinity Cathedral, said:

"The lights in the church are being turned out for the purpose of aiding the congregation to concentrate on the speaker. Only the pulpit light is turned on, to give a view of the speaker's face. Through this system the efficiency of concentration is raised a great degree."

Both morning and evening services are conducted in this manner, Dean Moor said, and the experiment has proved its worth.

MELLON, PAYNE DUE HERE AT MIDNIGHT

Noted Officials to Address Welfare, Emergency Rally On Eve of Huge Campaign

A. K. Oliver, president of the Welfare Fund, learned this morning that Secretary of the Treasury A. W. Mellon and Assistant Secretary of War Frederick H. Payne, principal speakers at the mass meeting for the Welfare Fund and Emergency Association in Syria Temple tomorrow will arrive at midnight tonight.

The meeting, on the eve of the opening of the drive Monday, will start at 2:45 p. m., 15 minutes earlier than previously scheduled. The change in time was found necessary to permit the program being broadcast for an hour over Station KDKA.

Plans for conducting the campaign were outlined to 500 workers in the employe division by leaders at a meeting in Fort Pitt Hotel last night. William E. Quinby was chairman.

Speakers were Mr. Quinby, the Rev. Dr. Carl Wallace Petty, pastor of the First Baptist Church; Joseph Dilworth, Frank R. Phillips and G. A. Doyle. All expressed confidence that the campaign will be a success.

Mr. Phillips said that already more than 2,000 men are at work on construction projects made possible by the Emergency Association. More will be employed on a gradually increasing basis, he said, adding that it is expected that about 15,000 will be given work for about three months.

Lily Pons, the latest sensation among singers, and deservedly so, renewed her triumphs in Syria Mosque last night. There was a gala audience to welcome her, and she did everything to confirm our previous belief that she is a rising star.

Mr. Lissfelt

The simple beauty of her voice alone must have taken this audience by surprise; her lovely stage presence only enhances the voice; and her excellent method of tone production lends the finishing touches. One or two of the highest tones have not yet found a secure berth but they will. Nothing can become so wearisome as a program of airs for coloratura fireworks, but Lily Pons is a good musician, and by careful adjustment of tone color and delicate rhythms, she fills her scale, her trill and her sustained notes with real meaning. A simple vocalise, wordless too, in her voice is full of tenderest sentiments.

Few were in entire sympathy until she found her true genre in Bishop's favorite "Lo, Hear the Gentle Lark." We hardly missed the flute obligato. Her "Caro Nome" was childishly simple, she was totally in the part, and here was the best singing of the entire evening. There is no greater contrast in any opera than in the two roles of "Pamina" and the "Queen of Night" in Mozart's "Magic Flute." Purity and malice are characterized there in every phrase of the music, and Lily Pons is one of the few who have shown this so distinctly. There is no telling what alterations can still be made in Rossini's "Una voce poco fa," but the many variations in the coloratura of this aria keep it perpetually interesting.

It is now to be hoped that we may hear this voice in richer gems of miniature song literature. There were many encores, among them the popular "Filles de Cadiz," "Se tu m'ami," an imitation of a music box puppet, and an air with variations of Saint-Saens. Giuseppe Bamboschek played accompaniments.

Blood Gift Appeal Over Radio Saves Life of Girl, 9

ATLANTA, Nov. 7.—(INS.)—A plea by radio for volunteers to give their blood in an emergency transfusion saved the life of 9-year-old Frances Roper.

Victim of a bone infection, the little girl was sinking rapidly when a blood transfusion was ordered.

An appeal for volunteers, broadcast by a local radio station at request of the hospital superintendent, brought immediate answer from 75 volunteers.

The operation was performed, the child rallied and was well on the way to recovery yesterday, physicians said.

C. J. Ward, of Cleveland, O., reported to detectives last night that his wife's Japanese mink coat was stolen from his automobile parked on Liberty avenue near Sixth street.

NOTED SOPRANO HERE SUNDAY

Mme. Elsa Alsen, the Wagnerian soprano, who will sing Sunday evening at the concert of the Pittsburgh Symphony Orchestra, is a real daughter of all nations.

She was born on a farm near Bialostok, in Russian Poland, of a Norwegian father and a French mother. She was educated in Austria, Germany and Switzerland. She came to America with the first Wagnerian Opera Company after the war and appeared in Pittsburgh in 1923 as Isolde and Brunnhilde. For a number of seasons she was the leading soprano of the Chicago Civic Opera. Now her home is in Hollywood.

Besides her Isolde and Brunnhilde, she is famous in the role of Marta in D'Albert's "Tiefland" and as Octavian in Strauss' "Rosenkavalier." She sang these roles in English, and, in her opinion, English is one of the best of all languages for singing.

PINCHOT URGES POWER CUT

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 7.—(AP.)—Gov. Gifford Pinchot, speaking before the American Academy of Political and Social Science last night, said that electric power and electric appliance companies could contribute to the forward movement for industrial recovery by lowering their prices.

The Academy is holding a two-day meeting discussing "Power and the Public." The Governor said:

"Nobody questions the field for increased use of appliances at more reasonable prices. Low cost of current means low cost of operation, and that induces purchase. With the increased use of appliances, there would be increased consumption and under an adequate system of regulation a further reduction of rates would become possible."

Parents Who Stole To Save Children Get Freedom

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—(INS.)—Justice was tempered with mercy in the Bronx County Court, and William and Mary Kirschenbaum, who robbed taxi drivers to feed their four starving children, need not go to jail.

Instead, District Attorney McLoughlin, the Federation of Jewish Charities and A. Affens, a New York attorney, who read of their plight, persuaded Judge Barrett to place the couple on probation for five years.

Their four children, ranging in ages from 2 months to 4 years, will now be reunited in a new home, which the social agency is providing for them. Kirschenbaum, who lost his taxi driver's license, has been promised a job.

GLIDER RECORD SET IN STORM

ELMIRA, N. Y., Nov. 7.—(AP.)—Soaring in a snow-laden wind, Frank Gross and Howard Funk, of Akron, O., established an unofficial American record of 2 hours 13 minutes aloft in a two-passenger utility glider here yesterday.

The strong wind also hoisted the men to an unofficial altitude record of 2,400 feet.

It was the first time this type of glider carrying two men has taken a soaring flight. The men dodged snow squalls and finally found themselves in a snowstorm so dense they flew "blind" for two minutes. The wind attained such velocity it required 16 minutes to force the glider to earth, a landing being effected only through a series of sharp dives.

The flight was over rolling country noted for favorable gliding conditions and chosen for national glider meets in 1930 and 1931.

Coolidge New Job May Increase Capital Visits

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7.—(INS.)—Calvin Coolidge may visit the capital more frequently than he has since he relinquished the presidency in 1929—which has been anything but often—since he was appointed chairman of the plan and scope committee of the Folger Shakespeare Library.

His appointment was announced yesterday by William S. Slade, the librarian, and it will require him to take an active part in the library's management.

Pittsburgher Again Asks Radio Permit

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7.—(AP.)—John Brownlee Spriggs, of Pittsburgh, has resubmitted an application to the Radio Commission for a broadcasting license. An original petition was withdrawn recently by Spriggs to make changes in the intended equipment.

FIGHT DEFENSE OF PANTAGES

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 7.—(INS.)—Alexander Pantages, wealthy theater man today was preparing to show a jury trying him for an alleged attack on Eunice Pringle, pretty dancing co-ed, that Miss Pringle had sued him for $1,000,000 damages.

The trial was in recess until Monday following a searching cross-examination of Miss Pringle on her story that Pantages lured her into his inner office when she visited him applying for vaudeville booking.

The prosecution will resist attempts to bring in the fact of Miss Pringle's damage suit in the criminal trial. Jerry Geiser, chief defense counsel, said:

"This civil case is vital to our defense. Our defense is based on the theory that Miss Pringle and possibly others, conspired to compromise Pantages and force him to give Miss Pringle a job."

Yes—CAMELS are the fresh cigarette

They're never parched or toasted!

A HUMIDOR package can preserve freshness only in cigarettes that are fresh to start with; it cannot freshen cigarettes that are dried-out or factory-stale.

If Camels were made under any method which dispelled their natural moisture—if it were parched or toasted out—the Camel Humidor Pack could not possibly be the boon to smokers that it is.

But Camel cigarettes are fresh cigarettes to start with—as fresh and fine as choicest materials, scrupulous care and great skill can make them.

Give your throat a vacation from the harsh hot smoke of parched dry-as-dust strong tobaccos—taste the smooth flavorful delights of a fresh cigarette.

Switch to mild, cool-burning, throat-friendly Camels for just one day—then leave them, if you can!

Patricia Pitt's Sprightly Comment on Pittsburgh Society Happenings

In Mayfair —With— Patricia Pitt

Syria Mosque was a mosaic of vivid colors, with the somber costumes of the men as contrast last night when Lily Pons sang for an audience filling every seat from the parquet circle to the dizzy heights of the second balcony.

And there were many standing.

The boxes and parquet circle scintillated with smartly garbed society folk. And many of the debs were there guests of Miss May Beegle.

Throngs Attend

Mrs. Gordon King in orchid crepe, and Mrs. Wilmer M. Jacoby arrived together. Mrs. Herbert A. May wore aquamarine blue transparent velvet and a white fur wrap; Mrs. Walter F. Schleiter was in black chiffon, and Mrs. Samuel Harden Church in black velvet.

Sitting in their box were Mrs. Howard S. Evans and her daughter, Louise. Arriving together were Mrs. William Zang and her daughter, Nell Stewart Zang. Mrs. George S. Baton wore sky-blue satin and a blue velvet and ermine wrap.

Others I noticed arriving were Mrs. George Pearson and Mrs. A. K. Oliver, Mrs. A. Rex Flinn, Helen McAfee, Mrs. Richard Reed, Mrs. Herbert DuPuy and her daughter, Mrs. Frederic I. Merrick.

Sylvia Robertson I saw during intermission in the foyer. She wore a smart cream satin gown and an emerald green velvet wrap. The E. Paul Tunnells were there with Mrs. Tunnell in black lace and an amethyst velvet wrap.

Autumn's Hues

La Salle Dorrance chose a gown of white satin and a striking long wrap of Dublin green velvet with a cape of ermine. Frances Reed wore orchid lace with a wrap of striped silver satin collared in chinchilla, and I saw the Joseph Bialases. Mrs. Bialases is the former Louise Smith MacDonald. She wore blue lace and a wrap of white satin and sable.

I saw the H. V. Blaxters arriving. Mrs. William Thaw Jr., in orchid crepe, Mrs. John W. Lawrence, in flowered chiffon, Mrs. George Singer Ehbert, Mrs. Mortimer Miller, and Mrs. James E. Lewis in a gown and a long wrap of American beauty velvet with a collar of ermine.

Mrs. W. L. Jones Jr. was there with her mother, Mrs. William Maclay Hall. Mrs. T. Clifton Jenkins, and her daughters, Elisabeth and Dorothea, and Mrs. W. H. Rowe Jr.

Sitting in their box were the William Watson Smiths, with Mrs. Smith in black velvet, and Mrs. W. J. Holland and Mrs. James I. Kay.

Others I noted were Mrs. Dudley Liggett in purple chiffon, Miss Agate Brown in black lace and white chiffon; Mrs. Kinley Tener, in beige lace; Mrs. B. R. B. Townsend in almond green lace, Mrs. G. A. Benny, Mrs. Edward A. Woods, Mrs. Frank Dravo and Mrs. S. G. Cooper.

Plans have been completed for the marriage on Friday, January 8, of Katherine Lee Bayard Hilles, daughter of Mrs. William Samuel Hilles, of Ommelanden, Wilmington, Del., to George Lewis Callery, son of the Dawson Callerys of Pittsburgh. Due to mourning in the Callery family, the ceremony will be a quiet affair, taking place in the Hilles home. Only the members of the families will attend, and there will be a small reception at 3 o'clock in the afternoon. The Rt. Rev. Philip Cook, bishop of Delaware, will officiate. Mrs. M. Callery Coudert, of New York, will be the matron of honor, and Francis A. Callery, also of New York, will serve as best man. Mr. Callery and his bride will spend the winter in Olympia, Fla., and in the spring go to the French Riviera.

January Wedding

Katherine attended the Misses Hebb's School in Wilmington; Villa Dieudonne, Paris; the Baldwin School, Bryn Mawr, and Mme. Rieffel's French School, of New York. She made her bow in November, 1919, and was presented at the Court of St. James in May, 1931. She is a former president of the Junior League of Wilmington, and is chairman of the International Committee on Arbitrations and Admissions, which recently was appointed by the National Board of the Association of Junior Leagues of America. She is a granddaughter of the late Thomas F. Bayard, Secretary of State under Cleveland, and Ambassador from the United States to the Court of St. James.

Her fiance attended the Paul Ransom School and the Hun School, Princeton, later continuing his education abroad. He is a direct descendant of Gen. Andrew Lewis, of Virginia, and Capt. Jonathan de Vol, of Rhode Island. He is a member of the Pittsburgh Golf Club, Fox Chapel Country Club and the Allegheny Country Club.

As I have told you, the first bud of the season, Nancy Jane Longenecker, daughter of the Charles Longeneckers, of Maryland avenue, made her bow yesterday in the Twentieth Century Club. And did you know that her mother had four aids, Mrs. William Maclay Hall, Mrs. Ralph Longenecker, Mrs. James Childs Rea and Mrs. William R. Scott?

Yule Party Plans Made By Congress Home Group

Tentative plans for an unusual Christmas meeting—a luncheon, demonstration and program as a benefit to raise its budget quota—were made yesterday by the home department of the Congress of Clubs. It was suggested by Mrs. Evelyn Gardiner Saudek, chairman of the department, that all Congress members and their friends be invited to the affair.

Helen V. Irwin, Congress drama chairman, opened yesterday's program with a delightful reading, "His Place in the Line," which told of "Benny Boy," who was "just beginning six going on seven" and learning how to brush his teeth "to the right slippery." The reading served as a most appropriate introduction to the talk on "What Vocational Guidance Means to Parents," by Frank Leavitt, associate superintendent of public schools.

Vocational guidance, Mr. Leavitt said, has put the spirit of generosity into the school system in that it allows the pupil to do something he really wants to do. It offers to parents an opportunity to ask questions at sources where they will be answered authoritatively and impersonally.

PATENT LEATHER TRIMMINGS LAST WORD IN SMARTNESS

Paris Bureau, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, Nov. 7.—Patent is being applied to some of the newest clothes with really shining success. Patent leather trimmings have really sneaked up and on to us through the medium first of patent belts and then patent covered buttons. And so now we have suits with whole big revers and cuffs of shiny patent, and very nice they are, too. Leather trimmings go excellently with woolens and so it isn't surprising to see so much of it, since woolen fabrics are so much in the ascendent this year, more so than ever before.

THE NEW WOOLEN suits and ensembles now being shown are the last word in trim smartness, managing to be so neat and tailored without a touch of severity. All of them have wonderful lines, since it seems to be the mission of dressmakers these days to make us look slim before thinking of making us look beautiful. But perhaps the one quality predicates the other.

WE HAVE CULLED two of Chanel's very newest and smartest street suits for sketching purposes. The first shows how Madame Chanel has taken up patent leather in a big way. The material is heavy black wool jersey with black patent. The double-breasted wide-lapelled bodice is rather suggestive of a waistcoat. A vest of white linen with a tiny bow is seen between the lapels. Mme. Chanel makes a small hat of patent with a cuff-like brim as a smart accessory.

GOOD NEWS :-: Fortune Smiles on Actor Twice Same Day :-: AMUSEMENTS :-: Critics See the Shows And Have Their Say

By HARRISON CARROLL

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 9.

Norman Foster got two pieces of good news in one day. The first is that he will have an important role in Dick Barthelmess' picture, "Alias the Doctor."

The second is that he and Claudette Colbert will not have to be separated for some time to come. Due to her recent illness Paramount has postponed the eastern picture. William Boyd already had left for New York, but a wire caught him in Chicago. Charles Starrett's trunks were at the station when he received word of the change in plans.

Claudette Colbert

"Alias the Doctor," in which Foster plays a story with a Continental background. Barthelmess is seen as a student who is expelled from medical school, but who comes back to practice under an assumed name. Incidentally, the film will mark Ray Griffith's debut as a Warner supervisor.

WILLIAMS MOURNED

Poor Robert Williams. Only recently he had sold his house and belongings in the East and had planned to live in California in good health. His tragic death has saddened all of Hollywood, and particularly his co-workers at the Pathe studio.

If he had lived, Pathe was planning to shoot around him until he could return to the picture.

Now, of course, the show must go on.

Roland Young

Pathe already has tried and failed to get Leslie Howard and Roland Young for the part. Howard says he is opening in a Philip Barry play in New York and Young is booked at M. G. M. and then at Paramount in the Chevalier picture.

The chances are the studio will re-write the part to fit another personality. This is being held in abeyance, however, pending the return of Charles S. Rogers.

LATEST GOSSIP

When the Malibu film colony caught fire this week many of the house owners were at the fights. An announcement was made, but failed to precipitate any drama. Few of the owners left their seats. . . . Hollywood is commenting on the fact that Judith Wood (Helen Johnson) and Herman Brix, shot-putting champion, are frequently seen together these days. . . . Ruth Chatterton made her last scene for Paramount on Wednesday. Barring retakes, of course. Incidentally, Ruth and Ralph Forbes were among the film people who attended the concert of Roland Hayes, Negro tenor. . . . Edna May Oliver is heading for the East for a two weeks' vacation. . . . The stars are frequently seen at "The Follies," a Los Angeles burlesque theater. Pola Negri is one who has been there recently. . . . According to Lothar Mendez, he and Lady June Inverclyde are delaying their marriage because of the attitude of English courts to Reno divorces. She recently got her freedom in the popular knot-cutting resort. . . . Ken Murray and Mary Brian have an offer to do 11 weeks in vaudeville after the first of the year. . . . Clarence Brown is one of the few Hollywood directors who plans to work Saturday afternoon when the University of Southern California meets Stanford at the Olympic Stadium here.

Many Thrills In Hearst News

"THE GLOBE TROTTER"

The story of three Americans who were cast away on an uninhabited island in the Pacific for six months is brought to the screen in the current issue of Hearst Metrotone News, showing in the Penn, Fulton and other theaters. Paul Stackwick, Gordon Brauner and Elmer Pallister, all of San Diego, Cal., subsisted on cocoanuts, fruits and wild hog, and covered their nakedness with skins and grass. They are shown landing at Panama after their rescue. They brought with them nothing except two strange birds. They tell the story of their strange experience.

Hearst Metrotone News cameraman and the Globe Trotter made the voyage of 500 miles on the world largest dirigible, the Akron, over Washington, Philadelphia and New York. You see the first and only sound pictures ever taken of the interior of the mighty airship, views of the Washington monument, the dome of the Capitol, the beauties of Philadelphia, New York Harbor, Statue of Liberty and the canyons formed by New York skyscrapers.

WEDDING IN ENGLAND

Scenes attending the marriage of the niece of Queen Mary of England, Lady May Cambridge to Capt. Abel Smith, of the Life Guards Regiment, are shown. Permission to make these pictures is almost as unusual as the fact that Lady May selected a commoner for her husband.

Mussolini makes his first visit to Naples since his march to Rome nine years ago. It was from this city that his triumphant journey started, and a holiday is declared in honor of the Premier's visit.

STEEPLECHASE SPILLS

Steeplechase pictures come from Kempton, England. The course is slippery and dangerous and there are several tumbles directly in front of the camera.

Canine heroes of New York City are presented with medals. Owners of the dogs tell amazing stories of rescues performed by them.

Outstanding plays in several of the big football games show various "tricks of the trade." Forward passes, fake kicks and other plays are illustrated.

Wife Threatened Him Divorce Seeker Says

John I. Walker, residing at the Keystone Athletic Club, charged that his wife, Mary Jackson Walker, of 200 Richland lane, threatened to kill him and his two daughters, in a bill of particulars filed in his divorce suit in Common Pleas Court.

She once attacked him and tried to break his glasses, expressing the hope of destroying his sight, she struck him on the head with a hand mirror and on occasions scratched and bit him, he charged. They were married August 19, 1926, and parted last April.

Postmaster's Wife Robbed of U. S. Fund

WILKES-BARRE, Pa., Nov. 7.—(A.)—Crossing a 10-foot alley on her way from the postoffice to her home, Mrs. Charles Wagner, 60, wife of Warrior Run postmaster, was held up and robbed of an iron box containing a small amount of cash, applications of several issued money orders, and money order forms numbered from 22,801 to 23,000. Mrs. Wagner was unable to furnish police with a good description of the thief.

All In A Day

By Mark Hellinger

Story of Success

THIS IS ONE of those stories that just happens to have happened. Maybe it would be better in one of the success magazines, but I'll take my chances. It concerns a famous New York physician who is nationally recognized as one of America's foremost medicos. I can think of no other doctor who is more highly respected in medical circles.

But, my hearties, 'twas not always thus. As a matter of fact, the man had a terrific struggle before he landed at the top. In his early youth he worked at odd jobs. When it came time for medical college it was necessary——very necessary—for him to work his own way through. To get the tuition fees he had to work as a waiter in a summer hotel. And that's where the story really begins.

The doctor—let's call him Phil—was employed by a hotel in Atlantic City. In those days, I suppose they regarded that establishment as a class joint. At any rate, Phil confided in the head waiter shortly after his arrival and told him exactly how matters stood.

My entire future depends on the tips I receive this summer, said the boy. "I need about $150 to continue my medical studies and I can't get along without that much.

"You see, one good table, a really good table, I mean—might do the trick for me. I know I couldn't get my entire tuition fee out of that table, but I'd break my neck to give every possible service. And when, during the summer, I get some sort of opportunity to tell the family about my situation, maybe they'd help out a little. See what I mean?"

The head waiter smiled. He liked the boy.

"All right, Phil," he replied. "I'll do the best I can for you. I have one family in mind right now. Smith is the name. It consists of a father, a mother and three children. They tell me Smith is rolling in dough, and the management insists that he have the best table in the dining room.

"You know what that means. I'll see that you get Smith's table. And the rest, of course, is up to you."

The Smith family was there for the summer and you can readily imagine how the young medical student worked for them and catered to them. He did everything that it was humanly possible for him to do. He found Smith to be a rather grouchy individual, but that didn't worry Phil. He knew he was giving the best that was in him, and something told him he would receive adequate recompense when the summer was over.

After two months, it was time for the Smith family to return to New York. Phil had received nothing from the man as yet, which cheered him rather than worried him. Far better a lump sum for his service at the end of two months than a daily or weekly tip that might mean very little.

At the end of the final meal, Smith summoned the waiter to his side. He removed a sealed envelope from his pocket.

"Young man," he said, "my family and I have found you to be an excellent waiter this summer. This is for you."

Phil received the envelope with nervous fingers. He had no way of knowing how much he had been given, but he felt it was very large. His future was in his hands! He tried to stammer his thanks.

"Gee, Mr. Smith," he chirped happily, "this is wonderful of you. I mean—well, it's just swell. Thanks very much. Thanks."

The youth raced back into the kitchen. With his heart pounding wildly, he opened the envelope. Inside was a $5 bill.

If you've ever been in a somewhat similar spot, you'll understand just how that boy felt. Heartbroken isn't the proper word. He felt as though the bottom had dropped out of his life. He felt as though he had been bitterly cheated. He felt—oh, well, what's the use of saying any more? I'm certain that you understand.

We now skip plenty of years and carry our story into the current year. By my very introduction of the yarn, you know that Phil made good in grand fashion. He received a break in finally digging up his tuition fee after that summer as a waiter, but it came along in due time. What else can you expect in a success story? No break, my friends, no success. And don't let them tell you differently.

If you think that Phil ever forgot Mr. Smith and his family, you can think again. As the years went by, he told the story over and over again. It was nothing more than a memory now—a memory of an experience. He could afford to laugh at it now, and he and his friends often did. The torture of a moment had turned into something that was almost a fond recollection.

A few months ago, fate provided an end to the story that had been interrupted by time. The now famous doctor was called in on a case that called for his type of service immediately. He was told beforehand that the patient had once been extremely wealthy, but now had very little left. Would Dr. Phil examine the patient just the same? Of course he would. He's been that kind of a guy for a long, long time.

You know, naturally, that the patient was Mr. Smith. The moment he walked into the house, the doctor recognized the family. They had been planted too deeply in his memory for him ever to forget them. But none of them recognized him. He might have looked vaguely familiar to one or two of them, but that was all. Too many years had gone by.

Dr. Phil did nothing to refresh their recollections. He said no word about that little hotel in Atlantic City and the manner in which he had once served them to the best of his ability. Instead, he was strictly professional. He examined the ailing Mr. Smith, and found the old man to be dangerously ill. He ordered an immediate operation and announced that he himself would do it.

That operation saved Mr. Smith's life. How long he would linger in life was, of course, problematical. But he was saved from death by this medico's master hand. And none knew it better than Mr. Smith's family.

They grew to love this doctor—almost to worship him, if I may use the word. They were worried about his bill and the physician knew that, too. Before he had so much as taken the case, he had been told of this family's financial condition. And he knew that they were barely managing to get along.

It was Mr. Smith who requested the bill one night. In his weak voice, he told the doctor that he knew he owed him his life. And now he wanted to pay. As he spoke he kissed the doctor's hand. I was a sad little touch—but true.

This, then, was the doctor's opportunity for revenge. His price could have been anything he saw fit. $1,000. $2,000. $5,000. Anything. But when his bill finally arrived, it read as follows:

"My total charge is $50. For the operation and my services, you owe me nothing. The $50 represents the tip you will finally pay to a waiter who served you in an Atlantic City hotel a long time ago."

Melodrama; Comic in Penn

By CLARENCE E. GRUNDISH

"Beau Hunks," which amounts to 40 minutes of movie comedy, and "24 Hours," which amounts to about 80 minutes of movie melodrama, feature the new bill in the Penn.

"Beau Hunks" co-stars Oliver Hardy and Stan Laurel. In this one Mr. Hardy is conscious of the Grand Passion and Mr. Laurel is conscious of nothing—not even the Grand Canyon. Anyway, they land in the French Foreign Legion and save the day by throwing tacks in the path of the barefooted invading hordes of Riffs—or riff-raff, as Mr. Hardy puts it. There's plenty of laughs.

A BIG DAY!

In "24 Hours" all of the action is slapped into two turns of the clock. At 11, p. m., a man and wife are estranged. Twenty-four hours later they are reunited. In between times there's much carousing and gun-play.

Two gangsters are killed in the course of the action, and a dance hall girl is "bumped off." And, though it has little to do with the story proper, a baby is born.

Clive Brook and Kay Francis do meritorious work in the principal roles, as the husband and wife. They belong to the aristocrats of society, but in a comparatively few hours they become entangled in a big city's low life.

MAKES THE ROUNDS

Mr. Brook makes a round of the town. From private party he goes to speakeasy, then to night club, then to cabaret girl's apartment and hence to jail.

Regis Toomey, with fewer kinks in his hair than usual, finds himself cast as an Italian gangster. He doesn't fit into his part so well.

Players From Dublin Bid Goodbye

By GEORGE SEIBEL

When Ireland sent her saints and sages throughout the world to plant the seeds of learning and piety, she became the mother of universities and churches. Perhaps she will now nurture a new theater through the work of those missionaries who have been five days in Pittsburgh "by special arrangement with the Irish Free State Government" to present a series of Irish plays under adverse circumstances. The Abbey Theater Company from Dublin is worth more to the Irish people than England's battle fleet and those new Irish plays are better than a whole library of laws.

George Seibel

Last night the company closed its engagement here with "June and the Paycock," called a tragedy by Sean O'Casey, its author, but a rollicking comedy for two whole acts. Characters true to life, laughter and tears, a fine undercurrent of sympathy for suffering humanity, dialogue that savors of the soil, an atmosphere of doom behind all the mirth, and acting that brought out all these elements and qualities until the picture was before us like a painting of Holbein or Duerer, that sums up O'Casey's play as it was played last night at Carnegie Music Hall.

Harry Fitzgerald and F. J. McCormick, as the two old cronies, were the two brightest stars in the constellation of actors. Jefferson and Florence, Robson and Crane never did teamwork more perfect in their palmy days. McCormick, a great tragedian, is also a great comedian. Fitzgerald, with a face on which he can paint anything, is one of the most amusing types on the present-day stage.

But perhaps the greatest honors should go to Eileen Crowe, because she had the greatest difficulties to surmount. She has youth and a lyric voice; she had to simulate age and a tragic despair. She did it well—her last exit with the agony of revolt in her prayer was unforgettable.

Humbly Father Pitt petitions the Irish Free State to let these players come again. Arthur Shields and Shelah Richards for their moving portrayal of the Boyle children; Maureen Delaney and May Craig for touching high points in comedy and pathos—all the rest for fine team work that made the drama seem absolute truth and life, deserve to rank as missionaries sent forth from Ireland to carry the gospel of art to a jazzified and sex-obsessed world.

We could spare Ireland a few skyscrapers and a few statesmen if we had a dramatic company in America as good as the Abbey Players.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

NORTH UVALDE, Tex., Nov. 7.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

Here I am in this beautiful little western town. Flew in here from the King ranch to visit a man who you are going to hear more of in the next few months than any man in America; that's just plain Jack Garner, who will almost surely be the next Speaker of the great House of Representatives. I never did go in much for this typical American stuff, but this fellow in his career and his home life will come pretty near living up to what we think one is. His only regret—and this is no bull either—in going back to Washington this time is how he and his wife will miss Nick Longworth. That alone almost keeps him from being typical anything. He raises Texas famous soft shell pecans—he gave me some and I just found out what a soft shell pecan is: it's one you can crack with just a small hammer. When I got here he was practicing with a gavel.

Our Heroine Suffers in Davis

By MILDRED FILLMORE

"Wicked," new Davis picture, is another of those weepy melodramas. It stars Elissa Landi and has her sitting behind jail bars pining her heart out for her little baby.

The star gets emotional and hysterical in the best manner of the theater, and the story follows the old weepy pattern closely.

Miss Landi is cast as a young wife, who gets her first disillusionment when the cops come to her house for her husband. He made the fatal mistake of trying to play a dual role—that of bank clerk and bank robber. And we mean "fatal" mistake! The police shoot him dead and carry his widow off to jail.

Comes a scene in the jury room with a lone man holding out for the girl's acquittal. There is going to be a baby, the law can't send her to prison is his idea. But the others, in a hurry to get home, think differently and finally induce the obstinate one to vote "guilty."

She goes off to a prison where the inmates spend their time making American flags and the visiting society matrons think it such an uplifting occupation. Eventually an old friend shows up from Australia. Then, after more suffering on the part of Miss Landi, the inevitable finale is reached.

Victor McLaglen is prominent in the supporting cast.

LONDON, Nov. 7.—(INS.)—Catholics and Republicans were involved in a violent riot last night in the Beatriz Theater in Madrid, completely wrecking the interior of the playhouse, according to an Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Madrid today.

MAGIC SHOWN KOMIC CLUBS AT THEATERS

Special Programs Thrill Thousands of Members; Big Show Set for Nov. 21

Today marked another glorious time for the thousands and thousands of children who attended meetings of the Warner Theaters-Sun-Telegraph Junior Komic Club at the 13 theaters where chapters have been organized.

There were big feature attractions at all the meetings.

The headliner at the Manor Chapter meeting was no less a celebrity than Tampa, the popular magician, who gave a magic show and distributed tricks to every child in the audience.

At the Enright Chapter, the children were entertained by the Eugene Marionettes—70 of them. And what a show they put on!

CLOWN ENTERTAINS

Boys and girls attending the Cameraphone and Schenley Chapter meetings were welcomed by Kippy, the Komic Club Clown, who romped about with them and later distributed prizes from the stage. Kippy comes through the courtesy of West View Park.

Every chapter meeting distributed prizes galore to winners of all sorts of contests, and members of the clubs entertained with song and dance numbers.

Wherever a group of club members meet these days, the main topic of conversation is the big show scheduled for the Stanley Theater, Sunday afternoon, November 15. Admission will be free to boys and girls whose attendance cards have been stamped at least four out of five times, showing that they have attended meetings of their chapter.

NEW CARDS TO BE GIVEN

For the benefit of children who have joined the clubs since these cards were distributed, at the meeting on Saturday, November 21, new cards will be distributed which will be honored at the next big show at the Stanley.

'TALKIE' TELLS KOMIC CLUB'S ACTIVITIES

Rosewell in Entertaining Fox Movietone Feature Showing at Theaters Here

Through the courtesy of Fox Movietone News, A. K. "Rosey" Rosewell, humorist, is appearing in a Fox Movietone subject now current at the Warner Theaters throughout the Pittsburgh district.

The subject of the film is the Warner Theaters-Sun Telegraph Junior Komic Clubs, and its purpose is to acquaint adult audiences with the entertainment and educational features thereof. "Rosey" made a special trip to New York to record this entertaining talk in the Fox Movietone studios.

Mr. Rosewell

Rosewell has made many records for electrical transcription and is constantly in demand as speaker and entertainer. He has had published several volumes of original verse and has interspersed his first Fox Movietone with poetry and humorous stories.

The Warner Theaters-Sun-Telegraph Junior Komic Club, Rosewell points out, serves a triple purpose. It brings home to children the value of organization properly directed; it is educational along the lines of Boy and Girl Scout work; and provides entertainment suited to their years.

The film will be shown tonight in connection with the Fox Movietone News, at the Cameraphone and the Kenyon Theaters.

Beginning Monday, the schedule will be: Belmar, Kenyon and Rowland Theaters, Monday and Tuesday; Manor and Arsenal, Wednesday and Thursday.

Through this subject, Warner Theaters and the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, with the co-operation of the Fox Movietone News, are presenting to the parents of Pittsburgh, the purposes behind one of the largest juvenile clubs ever organized.

ATLANTA, Nov. 7.—(INS.)—County policemen knocked on the door of a residence here and Mrs. J. L. Morgan, 22, appeared and said:

"Come in. I'm glad to see you."

She took the officers to the basement, where they found a huge still in full operation, and told them:

"My husband has been running it since last May. I have been living in constant dread of arrest. I'm glad it's all over now."

The policemen confiscated the still, 100 gallons of whisky and 2,000 gallons of mash, and are looking for the husband.

Stobie, state inland fish and game commissioner, for the toll of eight lives taken in the Maine woods during the first five days of the hunting season.

MAN SUES WIFE FOR 3 HOUSES

Asserting his wife had induced him to transfer properties from his name to hers, and put him out of his house when he lost his position, William H. Forman asked an order for reconveyance of the properties to him by an equity suit in Common Pleas Court, against Mrs. Bertha Forman.

They were married in March, 1917, and out of his earnings he bought houses at 6724 Kelly street and 515 and 517 Lloyd street, which he transferred to her June 1, 1922, after she importuned him to do so for their mutual benefit in their old age, the suit averred. September 11 she forcibly ejected him from their Kelly street home because he lost his position, and she refuses to let him return, he charged.

WHARF PARKING FREE AT NIGHT

Motorists parking on the Monongahela and Duquesne wharves at night are not obliged to pay parking fees, Inspector of Traffic Jacob Dorsey told the Pittsburgh Motor Club yesterday. Club members complained that a uniformed man, whom they believed to be a policeman, takes "anything you want to give" when asked about parking charges.

Most of the complaints have been received about the Duquesne wharf between Sixth and Seventh streets. In the evenings the wharf is filled with cars of theatergoers.

Dorsey told the club that the city does not charge for wharf parking after 6 p. m.

GANG GUNS KILL 3 IN DETROIT

DETROIT, Nov. 7.—(AP.)—Gangsters' guns took three lives for one last night in the down-river sector where a beer war has flared into sporadic outbursts of gunfire over a period of months.

Caught without his bodyguard for the first time since he cut short Joe Evola's ambitions to become a beer baron by beating him to the draw three weeks ago, Joe Rivetta, 60, was killed by a volley from two revolvers and a shotgun in a Wyandotte saloon.

Charles Tear, 34, who was a Wyandotte patrolman until he resigned to open the saloon where the shooting occurred, fell in the same volley.

John Pellitier, 40, bartender, who was off duty but sipping a drink at the bar when the gunmen entered, was the third victim. He lived three hours. The others died instantly.

Boy Kills Comrade In Hunt Accident

JOHNSTON, R. I., Nov. 7.—(INS.)—Playing hookey from school to go hunting proved fatal to Michael Konjoian, 16, who was accidentally shot and killed by John Vaderlindem, 19. Both were students at Providence Trades School.

Sighting a crow, Vaderlindem raised his rifle and fired, the bullet passing through Konjoian's head. Vanderlindem carried his companion a mile through the woods to a farm house, but the youth had died instantly.

ALTOONA, Pa., Nov. 7.—(AP.)—Indorsement of the State League of Third Class Cities is to be sought for an unemployment relief plan sponsored by Thomas S. Stephenson, of Altoona, and the Blair County Motor Club. The plan calls for transfer of $30,000,000 from the state general fund to the motor license fund, the money to be given to cities, boroughs, townships in ratio to road mileage. The sponsors estimate jobs would be provided for 200,000 men over a three-month period.

7 Miners Arrested As Coal 'Bootleggers'

BLOOMSBURG, Pa., Nov. 7.—(AP.)—Seven Centralia miners have been arrested on charges of trespassing and illegal mining brought by the Lehigh Valley Coal and Navigation Company. The miners were working without permission in a strip mine to get coal to "bootleg," police said. The seven were fined $1 each by a local justice of the peace, for trespassing and held in jail for want of bond for court on the mining charge.

Hero Medal Awarded McKeesport Soldier

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7.—(AP.)—Thomas Mauchline, private, has been awarded a citation for a soldier's medal by the War Department. Now stationed in the Philippine Islands, Mauchline at his enlistment lived at 2413 Mercantile street, McKeesport, Pa.

The citation was awarded for Mauchline's "exceptional heroism" in endeavoring to save the life of a comrade who had fallen into a dark open well. Mauchline, the citation said, "with utter disregard of his own personal danger, dove headfirst into the well and succeeded in recovering the body" of the unfortunate soldier.

CITY EMPLOYES RESENT LEVY

An undercurrent of protest against a three-day pay assessment from all city employes for the Welfare Fund was heard at the City-County Building today, following announcement of the assessment by Mayor Charles H. Kline and department heads.

Employes feel, they said, that a three-day pay assessment, coupled with a two weeks' furlough required as an economy measure was "too much." The assessment last year for the fund was only one day's pay.

Mrs. Enoch Rauh, director of the Department of Public Welfare, said the larger assessment was decided upon this year because of the large number of persons in need of food and clothing. Unemployment has increased so, she said, that much more money will be needed for relief.

Employes, she announced, will be permitted to pay the assessments over a period of several months.

MADRID, Nov. 7.—(AP.)—Shocking the fans, Juan Belmonte, once king of the plazas, but now retired, was gored by a bull yesterday at an exhibition performance for the benefit of Madrid's unemployed.

After attempting to bait the bull on horseback in Portuguese style, Belmonte dismounted and used his cape. The bull snagged him and rolled him around the ground.

While the speechmaking still was going on opponents of the candidate cut loud-speaker wires.

Wall Street Pays Farmers In Rain Checks

By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER

Farms are run by ticker tape.

Every time wheat hops a penny it means $3,500,000 more for the farmers.

When it skids a cent he loses that much. Does he profit by the paper transactions? Nope. When he loses and when he wins they give him a rain check.

Hedging and profit-taking in the grain pit skimmed the cream off the interurban boom. The poor old weedbender works from caint to caint. That means from when you caint see in the morning until you caint see at night.

He's gathered the wheat, garaged the machinery, bagged the crops, sprained his back and has blisters on his hands like spare tires. That's a full day's work for anybody.

But only poets can look at the setting sun and know that all is well. After that battered old stubble pedestrian has labored until he collapses he still has to call up Wall street and ask:

"How am I doing?"

Kelly, Holdup Slayer, Gets Freedom Next Month

Early in December, Gilbert W. Kelly, convicted slayer of James H. Neal in the Boggs & Buhl payroll holdup in 1921, will be paroled from Western Penitentiary, where he has been serving a 10 to 20-year sentence, Warden Stanley P. Ashe announced today.

The announcement was made following the monthly meeting of the prison board yesterday. At the meeting it was brought out that the convict was eligible for parole, having served his minimum sentence, and having a perfect prison record.

Gov. Gifford Pinchot recently approved the Pardon Board's recommendation that Kelly's sentence be commuted. The papers were sent here from Harrisburg Thursday.

EVENING SUN-TELEGRAPH MARKETS

Stock Exchange Topics

Wall Street Continues To Watch Action of White Metal

Wall street students continue to attach great importance to the action of silver. It is pointed out that changes in the value of the white metal have far-reaching influence. A good advance at any time in the near future would be a most optimistic development, not only on conditions in this country but also in foreign nations, which would be customers of our manufacturers.

Continental Oil of Delaware has firmed up recently on buying influenced by the important strides the company has made in strengthening its financial position. Continental has caled for retirement $7,500,000 of 5 per cent notes on December 15, with the redemption of this issue, the funded debt of the company will be cut down to $11,000,000. Such a level will compare with funded debt of $43,241,000 in 1929, when the company was organized through a consolidation of Continental Oil of Maine and Marland Oil Company. This substantial reduction was accomplished in face of the generally unfavorable conditions existing in the oil industry over the last two years.

Resumption of dividends by Archer-Daniels-Midland after omission of payments for nine months, is one of the reflections of what can be done when directors consider conditions satisfactory. It is probable that a dividend on the stock could have been continued in the period when nothing was done for stockholders, but caution dictated the omission. Once general business has improved definitely there probably will be many payment resumptions because most companies have kept a strong balance sheet position and can afford to give first consideration to stockholders.

Reports in Wall street are that there was forced selling in Ingersoll Rand recently which accounted for the decline in the stock. It now is rumored that most, if not all, of this liquidation has been completed. The issue on several occasions in the past acted as though stock was hanging over the market. The company's business usually moves in line with steel operations, and any upturn in the latter would, of course, be reflected in Ingersoll Rand's operations.

Trade interests are of the opinion that there are definite indications of greater stability in the alcohol industry, with the prospects that leading producers will be able to record a better margin of profit next year than was possible under conditions existing in the past 12 months. This view is reflected in the accumulation which continues to be reported in United States Industrial Alcohol.

The market is rapidly being "cleaned up" of stock that has been hanging over and with the further strength in New York yesterday several good-sized selling orders in Lone Star were cancelled. Floor traders believe if the stock crosses 10½ it can easily sell up to 12. The company is earning its dividend and a surplus in addition. The next dividend meeting will be held in the forepart of December with the dividend payable at the end of the month. A canvass of the New York Curb position of the stock also shows rather clear sailing for an upward movement.

For nine months to September 30, net loss was $2,538,551, compared with net profit of $4,710,607 in the first nine months of 1930.

ECONOMIES AID REMINGTON SHOWING

Third Quarter Expenses $1,200,000 Less Than Same Period Last Year

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—Remington Rand has shown an encouraging ability to hold up its gross profits, although sales are only 50 per cent of 1929 volume. This is due to the economies effected despite the fact that the company maintains a world-wide branch sales organization. An indication of these economies is given by the fact that selling and administrative expenses were down somewhat more than $1,200,000 for the three months ended September 30, 1931, compared with the same months last year. Of course sales volume was smaller, but the lower sales commissions would only account for about $370,000 of the decrease, showing that administrative and selling expense has been reduced roughly $900,000 a quarter, compared with a year ago. Full benefit of these economies will not be felt until this month.

STRONG CASH POSITION

The company ends the second quarter with cash position strong, having on hand in cash September 30 slightly more than $7,000,000, or only slightly over $1,000,000 less than a year ago, despite the loss of over $1,500,000 in the last six months. The company ended the second quarter of its fiscal year with net current assets over $26,000,000, which compares with bonds outstanding over $20,000,000 in the hands of the public.

It is therefore evident that with its strong cash position, large excess of current assets and the economies that the management has made in recent months, Remington Rand is well able to go through the depression. The company should show a rapid increase in profits as soon as gross sales begin to increase.

TWO NEW MODELS

Remington Rand will soon bring out two new typewriters.

It is expected that these new models will somewhat stimulate business. The company's foreign business has shown improvement during recent months, but the company's domestic sales are holding at about the same level as in the second quarter of the fiscal year, with economies enabling the company to show improvement in results rather than any increase in gross sales.

Bankruptcy Petition Filed Against Firm

An involuntary petition in bankruptcy against the Perfect Laundries of Pittsburgh, Inc., was filed yesterday in Federal Court, claims involving $794 having been noted by three creditors.

CIGARET PROFIT HIGHER

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7.—(AP.)—Cigarets, the main division of the tobacco industry, are expected to return more profits to their makers this year despite a decline in consumption.

This statement, which has been advanced by leading companies, is predicated on the assumption present prices for leading brands will continue throughout the next two months. The average price level for the four leading cigarets is now calculated to be $2.83 per 1,000 after government tax and trade discounts.

Estimates of the industry, indicate the consumption for 1931 will be in the neighborhood of 115,000,000,000 cigarets, as compared with the peak of 120,000,000,000 last year. The decline is popularly ascribed to the "roll your own" campaign started by tobacco manufacturers, to the higher prices prevailing in the cigaret industry itself, and to the increase in the consumption of snuff.

The estimated value to manufacturers of this year's expected production with present prices prevailing during the remainder of the year will be about $325,000,000, the industry calculates, as compared with $316,000,000 at last year's higher production and lower price level.

GRAVEL OUTPUT SHOWS DROP

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7.—(AP.)—Total production of sand and gravel reported by producers in the United States for 1930 amounted to 197,051,726 short tons, valued at $115,176,543. This amount is calculated by the Bureau of Mines as a decrease of 11 per cent in quantity and 13 per cent in value in comparison with the previous year.

There were decreases in quantity and value for the total output of all classes of sand and gravel except paving gravel, the output of that material showing an increase of 7 per cent in quantity, though the total value decreased 3 per cent, as compared with 1929. The gain in quantity of paving gravel was probably due, the bureau says, to the large amount of road work done in 1930 in the effort to offset to some extent the prevailing business depression and unemployment.

Cement Industry Improvement Seen

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—Returning from a 3-month business trip to Europe and South America, Holger Struckmann president of International Cement Corporation stated cement industry is giving indications of having turned the corner toward definite improvement and with sentiment generally better the industry faced a much improved outlook for 1932.

ACTIVE BUYING LIFTS STOCK MARKET

Trading Inclined to Quiet Down After Leading Shares Rise Fraction to 2 Points

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—(AP.)—Active buying again swept through the stock market in the first few minutes today, lifting leading shares fractionally to as much as 2 points.

The market was inclined to quiet down by the end of the first half hour, however, when signs of week-end profit taking appeared in spots, and American Can dropped a point.

Mining, food shares and steels were notably firm groups. Issues rising 1 to 2 included American Smelting, Youngstown Sheet and Tube, Beatrice Creamery, United Fruit, Union Pacific, Electric Autolite and Standard Gas.

There was nothing in the overnight news to dampen the spirits of bullish speculators; developments, in fact, were more favorable than otherwise. The National Credit Corporation, with assured subscriptions exceeding $400,000,000, was ready for business. Reports said that the railroad executives were planning a committee representing all lines for the purpose of conferring with union leaders on mutual problems, including wages. The labor executives association recently requested a conference.

Total steel ingot production, despite the lower operating rate, showed a gain in October, the first rise since March. Scrap prices have firmed in the Youngstown district.

Chicago advices said public participation had been an important factor in wheat's sensational upturn yesterday. One prominent operator was reported to be as aggressively bullish on corn as on wheat.

Sterling cables were off a cent to $3.79½.

Money Conversion Rates Made Lower

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7.—Continuance of the decline in the market price of foreign exchange for certain countries has made it possible to further reduce the conversion rates for international postal money orders on those countries, the Postoffice Department announces.

Commencing today, the money of the United States shall be converted into that of Great Britain, Northern Ireland, the Irish Free State, and New Zealand at the rate of $3.80 to the pound; into that of Denmark and Norway at the rate of 22 cents to the krone; into that of Netherlands and Netherland East Indies at 40 1-20 cents per florin; into that of Sweden at 23 cents to the krona, and into Swiss money at 19½ cents per franc.

Union Trust Asks Gulf Oil Tenders

Tenders will be received until noon, November 30, at the Union Trust Company of Pittsburgh, trustee, under indenture of the Gulf Oil Corporation of Pennsylvania, securing an issue of $35,000,000 15-year 5 per cent debenture gold bonds, dated December 1, 1922. Interest on accepted bonds will cease November 30, 1931.

Grand Union Sales Higher for Month

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—Grand Union Company store sales for four weeks ended October 31 totaled $2,873,902, comparing with $2,812,319 in the like 1930 period, an increase of 2.1 per cent. Tons of merchandise sold increased approximately 19 per cent during the period.

ROUND TABLE OF BUSINESS

PIONEER WORK IN 6-HOUR DAY STARTED

Chemical Industry Being Put on Reduced Time With More Men on Job

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER
Universal Service

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—In solving the major human problem of industry, namely, that of balancing man power against jobs, American business in the large has much to learn from the current pioneering experiments of the chemical industry with the six-hour day.

This adventure in redistributing leisure has been undertaken by a whole industry under the inspiring leadership of W. D. Huntington, chairman of the executive committee of the Manufacturing Chemists' Association and vice president of the Divison Chemical Company at Baltimore. Before inaugurating the new policy, Mr. Huntington conferred with President Hoover.

Mr. Rukeyser

In telling me what lies behind the innovation, Mr. Huntington said:

"Personally, I feel that industry generally could arrange its work on a six-hour day and eventually get as much out of the six hours as they have in the past out of eight, and when conditions improve, it may be possible to give the equivalent in wages of an eight-hour day for six hours' work.

"In my discussion of the six-hour day with President Hoover he referred to the fact that we are today experiencing the results of the tremendous development in the last decade in labor saving machinery, and as Mr. Hoover expressed it, there is no doubt but what part of our unemployment problem today is due to this fact. This is not only true of the factory, but also on the farm. Think of the number of farm laborers who lost their jobs because of the tractor, as well as great numbers in the cities where labor saving machinery has been installed and reduced the number necessary to carry on a definite operation.

SIMPLEST PLAN

"We, however, are not going to junk modern machinery and go back to the old uneconomical methods, but must face the problem with the idea of distributing labor as much as possible, and it seems to me the six-hour day is one of the simplest and less involved plans of any that I know of.

"We are adjusting our labor problems to as near the six-hour day as possible.

"As far as we can see, and from the information that I get from other companies in the chemical industry, the readjustment of hours has not had any effect on production. The real wage has been continued as before, but it simply means that the men are getting pay for 36 hours a week instead of 48 hours a week, and the difference is being paid to an additional number of men."

WINDOW GLASS DEMAND GOOD

Demand for window glass continued at its previous good level during the week while negotiations were under way for settlement of the wage differences of the unionized cutters, according to American Glass Review.

Absence of the cutters from their tables hampered shipments, but there was no noticeable letup in production. Apparently both sides to the wage controversy were hopeful that a settlement would be reached before many days. Factory stocks are not plentiful as far as popular sizes are concerned and while the absence of the cutters was not felt seriously at any factory this situation would not prevail for any great length of time.

Efforts of the national government in Washington to aid the building industry are getting much attention from the glass industry and it is hoped that a revival of home building may come with 1932.

Demand for plate glass shows little change. While future demand is expected from automobile manufacturers the current shipments to them are not large. Mirror makers and distributors are buying plate glass as needed and the demand has not been heavy enough to warrant any production increase.

Investment Bankers Open Their Convention Today

By GEORGE H. SNYDER

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W. Va., Nov. 7.—Interest of the financial world centers here today as more than 600 leaders of the securities business gather for the annual convention of the Investment Bankers' Association of America.

After two years of declining values for stocks and bonds, the delegates from all parts of the country are approaching the work ahead of them with the realization that the future course of the originators of securities must be plotted with greater care than ever before in order to restore channels for the distribution of stocks and bonds.

The investment bankers are faced with a buyers' strike. The sharp breaks in security prices and the high proportion of defaults in some classes of securities have produced a lack of confidence which must be overcome before underwriting operations can be resumed on a normal basis.

Improvement Seen Ahead

AS TRAINS FROM THE EAST, the West and the South raced the investment leaders into this resort center, the comment of delegates showed increased confidence in the start of business recovery early in 1932. As groups gathered on the trains last night, frequent mention of the initial signs of trade improvement was made. The gains in the output of steel and textiles and the expected increase in automobile production were referred to as the first straws indicating a change in the business wind.

While business recovery is generally anticipated in the near future, the investment bankers realized that definite steps must be taken to bring prosperity to their own business. A recovery of general activity will be reflected in better prices for securities, but this will provide only the foundation for improvement in the market for new issues. The weak situations which have come to light during the past two years must be corrected before new offerings of bonds or stocks will be received with confidence.

Real Estate Securities

FOREIGN BONDS AND REAL estate securities will receive a large share of the attention of the convention. Issues in these classes have had the poorest record of the last two years. Railroad securities, which are threatened with difficulties, also will come under close scrutiny.

The problems faced in restoring real estate securities will be discussed by Frederick C. Hack, of the Chicago law firm of Winston, Strawn & Shaw, at a special forum on real estate issues to be held at the close of the session on Monday. Louis K. Boysen, vice president of the First Union Trust and Savings Bank of Chicago and chairman of the association's real estate securities committee, will preside at this forum.

John J. Cornwall, general counsel of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad and former Governor of West Virginia, will speak on railroad securities at the regular session of the convention on Monday afternoon.

Convention activities today are to be confined to the registration of delegates and to meetings of the various committees where reports to the convention will be subject to final revision. The general sessions will get under way on Monday and will last until Wednesday.

JAPAN MEETS GOLD DEMAND

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 7.—Japan has shipped $75,000,000 in gold through this port during the past 30 days, it was disclosed here following the arrival of the latest shipment of $22,500,000.

Asked to explain the significance of the heavy gold shipments to this country, Tokuya Sakurauchi, manager of the local branch of the Yokohama Specie Bank, Ltd., asserted that behind these shipments was speculation in yen exchange and depreciation of Japanese securities in this country. He said:

"Japan is determined to strengthen her financial position in this country and demonstrate she is ready to pay on demand any obligation she has incurred.

"Many Japanese are also speculating on what developments may arise out of the Manchurian situation, with the possibility that the value of the yen might drop on foreign exchanges."

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—Gold transactions at New York resulted in a net gain in monetary stocks of $1,372,500 yesterday, the Federal Reserve Bank reported. There was a release from earmark for foreign account of $1,399,500. Exports were $20,000 to Switzerland and $7,000 to Jugoslavia. There were no imports at New York.

BROKERS' LOAN RATIO DOWN

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—Total borrowings by members of the New York Stock Exchange against collateral on November 1 amounted to 2.33 per cent of the market value of all shares listed on the exchange on that date, compared to 3.23 per cent on October 1, a decrease of 0.90 per cent during the month, and a new low record. The previous low was 2.93 per cent on July 1. On November 1, 1930, the ratio was 4.65 per cent.

Market value of all shares listed on the exchange on November 1 totaled $34,246,649,051, compared with $32,327,037,441 on October 1, an increase of $1,919,611,610.

During October, borrowings of members decreased $248,139,111 to a new low record of $796,268,768 at the end of the month.

As of November 1 there were 1,284 stock issues aggregating 1,318,586,847 shares listed on the exchange, against 1,284 issues aggregating 1,313,558,658 shares on October 1.

Average market value of all listed shares on November 1 was $25.97, against $24.55 on October 1.

WEATHER AIDS RETAIL TRADE

Cooler weather has resulted in a slightly better movement of seasonal merchandise at both wholesale and retail, according to R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review. Dry weather has restricted demand for rubber goods and kindred lines.

Demand for men's hats and heavy wearing apparel continues quiet while women's shoes and millinery are moving in slightly larger volumes. There has been a slight increase in demand for radios, but movement is largely of the cheaper sets.

A moderate improvement in demand is noted for radiators and heating equipment, also for sanitary equipment. The movement of bituminous coal is slightly higher, although still below that of a year ago.

Collections at both wholesale and retail continue to average slow.

Reading Company Loadings Increase

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 7.—Loaded cars handled by Reading Company in October were the second largest for any month this year amounting to 161,772, compared to 143,716 cars in September and 192,408 in October, 1930.

For 10 months ended with October loadings totaled 1,519,925 cars, against 1,819,984 in the corresponding 1930 period.

FURTHER GAIN IN STEEL OUTPUT

Shipments to Automobile Trade Higher; Industry Now in Need of Tonnage

By B. E. V. LUTY

Last week's one point rise in steel ingot production has been followed this week by a further rise of two points, to a rate of about 29 per cent. Coming at a time of year when the trend is usually downward, the rise is impressive, but it is not conclusive as to the remainder of the year, for a part of it is fortuitous, due to certain releases on fabricated structural steel work and rails.

The only increases in finished steel movement traceable to general underlying conditions are in fabricated wire fence and barb wire, being shipped to agricultural sections, and in steel for agricultural implements, the change in underlying conditions being the recent advances in cotton and wheat.

PRECEDENT UPSET

Predicted loosening in credit conditions would presumably encourage jobbers, manufacturers, consumers and others down the line to depart from their extremely niggardly policy as to the carrying of stocks, which on close analysis might be found to be quite inefficient and rather expensive. So far little or no loosening up tendency has been observed, but the time of the year is unpropitious, the regular practice having been to reduce stocks against January 1 inventory. As no reduction is possible now, the steel trade will be relieved of one influence which has regularly caused production to decline in the late weeks of a year.

Should steel production increase farther in the remainder of the year, or even hold its present rate fully, the augury for the future would be very favorable, on account of the increase coming at this unusual season. Increasing steel production in the first three or four months of a new year has been the regular thing, and does not prove much, for some years have made as good starts as others, only to have a sharp decrease to summer, and occasionally continuous decrease after March or April for the entire remainder of the year.

PRICES STEADY

Shipments of steel to the automobile trade have increased slightly while some steel has been bought and not yet released for shipment. Automobile production is believed to be on the up grade but production this month and next is chiefly a matter of making samples and stocks of new models, by no means an indication of public demand, the first measure of which will be furnished by the New York show a couple months hence.

Finished steel prices have held rigid since June except for the slight decline in hot and cold rolled strips reported a week ago.

CUTS DUE TODAY IN UNDEFEATED LIST

FOOTBALL FANS HERE today, though giving their attention mainly to the eighteenth battle in the 25-year-old series between Pitt and Carnegie Tech, were speculating as to the extent of the cuts the day's games throughout the country would make in the list of undefeated teams. A number of the elevens not yet beaten had let-down games scheduled which they appeared certain to win, yet there was a prospect that at least a few of the teams in the undefeated group would cease to hold membership in the select circle before nightfall.

Harvey Harman

One event certain to result in an elimination, barring the remote possibility of a tie, was the meeting of Notre Dame and Penn in South Bend, Harvey Harman, former Pitt lineman, had a clean record for his first five games as Penn's head coach. The hand-to-hand tussle today meant that either the Quakers or the Irish, the latter undefeated in 24 straight games, would have to get off the honor list.

OF THE OTHER unbeaten major teams, the only ones that appeared to have a struggle on their hands to keep their slates clean were Harvard in its meeting with Dartmouth, Georgia in its clash with New York U., Stanford in its tilt with Southern California, Bucknell in its contest with Georgetown, and Temple in its game with Villanova.

There were 22 undefeated elevens in all up to today. Besides Notre Dame, Penn, Harvard, Georgia, Stanford, Bucknell and Temple, the major list showed Cornell, Fordham, Northwestern, Syracuse, St. Mary's, Southern Methodist, Tennessee and Tulane. The others, which had not encountered major opposition, were Allegheny, Davis and Elkins, Johns Hopkins, Kansas Aggies, Maryland, Massachusetts Aggies and Ursinus.

NEWS OF THE sudden death of Happy Jack Chesbro, 56, from a heart attack on his chicken farm at Conway, Mass., came as a shock to Barney Dreyfuss, his former employer, and to veteran local fans, who remembered Chesbro not only as one of the Pirate greats of all time but as one of the best pitchers that baseball ever had known anywhere.

Chesbro got his big league start in Pittsburgh, coming to the Pirates from Richmond in July, 1899, under Manager W. H. Watkins. He cost only $1,500 at the time, but within two years he was worth a fortune in the baseball market. He was a total loss to the Pirate owners, however, as in 1903 he jumped to the New York club of the American League.

WHEN THE PITTSBURGH and Louisville clubs were consolidated for the 1900 season, Chesbro was one of 10 Pirates retained, the others being Jesse Tannehill, Sam Leever, Fred Ely, Bill Schriver, Frank Dillon, Clarence Beaumont, Jimmy Williams, Tom McCreery and Tom O'Brien. For the Bucs in 1901, Happy Jack led the National League pitchers with 21 games won and 9 lost, and he repeated in 1902 with 28 games won and 6 lost. He was a big factor in those two years in the first two pennants ever won by Pittsburgh.*

Jack Chesbro

HOWEVER, IT WAS while with the New York Americans that Chesbro reached his greatest heights, winning 41 games against 13 lost for a percentage of .759 in 1904, which still stands as the modern major league record for number of games won in a season by a pitcher.

Chesbro never was taken out of a single game in the 54 he pitched that season. He hurled one one-hit game, one two-hit, one three-hit, eight four-hit and six five-hit games, and turned in six shutouts. He had developed a spitball after leaving the Pirates and became the leading exponent of that style of pitching.

JACK WAS THE only moundsman ever to lose a pennant on a wild pitch. In 1904 the New York and Boston clubs fought such a close battle that the American League pennant was at stake on the final game of the season between them in Boston on October 7. In the ninth inning, with the score tied, a runner on third base and one out, Chesbro put so much stuff on the ball that it got away from the catcher, enabling the man on third to score the run that meant the game and the pennant.

Chesbro dropped out after the 1909 season and always blamed extra work in the American League for having shortened his career. He appeared here a few years ago in an exhibition game of old Pirates. Last year he recommended a couple of young pitchers from his home town, who may be tried out by the Bucs next spring. Death has laid a heavy hand on baseball veterans recently. George Washington Bradley, the second man to pitch a no-hit game; Jim Tyng, the first catcher to wear a mask; Joe Hornung, Giant pitcher and outfielder of the early days; Frank Dillon, old Pirate first baseman, and Charley Comiskey, Charley Murphy and Nick Burke, old club owners, were called within the last few weeks.

WHEN PITT RAN up a score of 41 points against 6 for Penn State last week it was believed that this was just one point better than the Panthers' highest previous total in that annual fixture. However, a check of the record shows that Pitt had never before made as many as 40 points against State. The Panthers' highest previous mark against the Nittany Lions was 31 points, registered by the great eleven of 1916. In fact, the game of 1916 and 1931 were the only ones in the entire series of 34 in which Pitt passed the 30 mark in points. The 1927 game was the only other event in which the Panthers made as many as 30.*

TABULATION OF THE results of the entire series show that Pitt has won 19 times and State 13 times, with two games resulting in ties. In previous calculations the Panthers were credited with a victory in 1905, but the records disclose that State, not Pitt, was the winner that year.

State still holds the high scoring record for a single game between the old rivals. That record is 59, scored at old Exposition Park on the North Side in 1903, the first year the teams played in Pittsburgh.

ANOTHER EARLY ADDITION to the list of veterans leaving the big baseball leagues is in prospect. Ray Schalk, former catcher, is to quit as coach of the Cubs and join with Clarence Rowland in the purchase of a minor league club.

Jim Thorpe

After resigning as White Sox manager in 1928, Schalk went to the Giants as coach and later to the Cubs in the same capacity under Manager Joe McCarthy. Paired with Charley O'Leary, he stayed as coach when Hornsby succeeded McCarthy.

JIM THORPE, by almost unanimous vote the greatest football player of all time, can still kick a ball the same long distances he used to register at Forbes Field when he came here with the Carlisle Indians to play Pitt two decades ago. As part of an entertainment for a crowd gathered to see Billy Burke and George Von Elm play golf against Mortie and Olin Dutra in Los Angeles, Thorpe gave a kicking exhibition. He got away three punts of 70 yards and drop-kicked with some of his old accuracy. Some of his punts, however, showed the effect of long absence from the game, rolling from his foot off the line as he tried to execute spirals.*

WORCESTER, Mass., Nov. 7.—The Night Riders from Duquesne University meet the Crusaders from Holy Cross this afternoon at Fitton Field here. Head Coach McEwan plans to start his reserve team against the visiting Pittsburgh eleven, as the Purple is pointing toward next week's game with Harvard, at Cambridge.

Duquesne arrived here yesterday and made their headquarters at Indian Inn, Webster. Yesterday afternoon they held a light workout on the gridiron of Nichols Junior College, at Dudley.

ROVINSKI TO START

Completing his practice for the game yesterday with a signal drill, Coach McEwan announced he would start Tony Rovinski at quarterback in place of Capt. Phil O'Connell.

It was Rovinski who defeated Rutgers almost single handed, running at will through the New Jersey outfit. The Duquesne boys will have to stop him this afternoon if they want to hold the Holy Cross scoring to a minimum.

The Mount St. James gridsters will go into the game without having scouted the Pittsburgh plays.

McEWAN WORRIED

All they know about the visiting team is that it uses the Rockne system, under the coaching of Elmer Layden. McEwan is worried because he wants to have his regulars for the Crimson clash, but is afraid Duquesne will show sufficient strength to require his first string men to win the game.

The ball carrying quartet the Purple mentor plans to start, Rovinski, Donevan, Jarvis and Harris, has almost as much speed, skill and power as his varsity backfield. Jarvis will do the kicking for the Crusaders and he and Les Griffin spent considerable time yesterday booting dropkicks between the uprights from near midfield.

John D. Holohan, Duquesne graduate manager, announced today that the teams will meet in Pittsburgh next season the Saturday before Thanksgiving day.

Christner, Schwake Fight No Contest

INDIANAPOLIS, Nov. 7.—(AP.)—The scheduled 10-round boxing contest between K. O. Christner, of Akron, O., and John Schwake, St. Louis heavyweight, was stopped in the sixth round by the referee and declared no contest here last night.

The men had been warned to speed up their work in the fourth round, and when they failed to satisfy the referee in the fifth and a part of the sixth, he stopped the bout.

Christner had an edge up to the time the bout ended.

GRIDDER BREAKS LEG

BETHLEHEM, Pa., Nov. 7.—(AP.)—Ned Conner, member of the Bethlehem High School football squad, had his right leg broken during scrimmage yesterday. He was taken to a hospital.

EXPLANATIONS OF RIPLEY'S CARTOONS OF YESTERDAY: THE BLIND TYPIST—Miss Laura Gregory, now employed by the Virginia Electric and Power Company of Richmond, Va., has the distinction of performing a task which would be extremely creditable even for a stenographer-typist with excellent vision and the best of training—and she is totally blind. Miss Gregory takes dictation direct to the typewriter as fast as a person ordinarily speaks, and in one day she transcribed 119 letters without error, by actual count—and "no doubt even more on other days when I did not have time to count them," she says. However, 119 individual letters in eight hours is an enviable record for anyone. COLLISION BY MEN OF THE SAME NAME—The fact that the drivers of two cars, involved in a collision, gave exactly the same names, caused a careful investigation by the police of Honolulu when William Simao crashed into William Simao at the intersection of Harding and Eleventh avenues, March, 1931. But thorough investigation reavealed that the drivers really had identical names—so we take it that "Simao" in Honolulu is like "Smith" in the United States.

PANTHER CUBS, KISKI TIE

SALTSBURG, Pa., Nov. 7.—Kiski Prep and the University of Pittsburgh freshmen put up one of the most stubborn grid games of the season here yesterday and after a gruelling struggle left the field all even at 6 points each.

Both teams scored in the first period. Kiski was the first to cross the goal line, Hamilton, halfback, hurling a beautiful 30-yard pass to Right End Mosscritt, who wiggled five more yards for the first touchdown. Mosscritt failed to kick the extra point.

Ken Ormiston, playing his first year with the Pitt team, and who starred at Kiski last year, was the Panther Cubs' star. The lineup:

Kiski—6		Pitt—6
Baker	L.E.	Seifert
Schell	L.T.	Kosal
Bomeser	L.G.	Katz
Brandin	C.	Shewell
Kane	R.G.	Ormiston

GRID TITLE AT STAKE

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 7.—(AP.)—Football leadership of the Pacific Coast Conference will be at stake today when Southern California's Trojans and Stanford's Indians line up in their classic at Los Angeles.

Sport Vignettes

Of all of the bunk that is finding its way into the public prints these days none is more nauseating than the international ballyhoo about a possible Jack Dempsey-Max Schmeling bout, which never will come about, or, if it does, should bring the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Washed-up Former Champions down upon the necks of the perpetrators . . . Obviously it's nothing but a well-boiled (corned beef and cabbage) plot to plug Dempsey's barnstorming tours and at the same time keep Schmeling and the heavyweight situation in the limelight . . . Tripe, we calls it, and not very good tripe at that.

Bert Munhall

They are boosting Muddy Ruel as the new manager of the Detroit Tigers, to succeed Bucky Harris after next season, when Muddy will act as coach and assistant to Harris . . . He caught for Washington when Bucky was the boy wonder manager of the Senators . . . Pitt, Carnegie Tech and the Dukes, all three, will figure in the benefit football tangle being talked about for the Stadium on Saturday, December 6, the proceeds to go to the unemployed . . . The tip-off on the fact that money is tight, if you haven't noticed any other signs, is the light advance sale for the Pitt-Carnegie Tech game today . . . Maybe the prices are out of the reach of the average fan in these times.

Col. H. B. Hackett, who refereed the Carnegie Tech-Notre Dame game here last Saturday, will serve in a similar capacity when the Irish play Penn at South Bend this afternoon. . . . Two undefeated elevens will clash in this battle. . . . The Notre Dame record, to settle disputes, is 23 wins in its last 24 games, with only the scoreless tie with Northwestern early this season to break the streak. . . . The first year Hunk Anderson served as assistant to the late Knute Rockne at Notre Dame, in 1922, the Irish defeated Carnegie Tech, 19-0. . . . In 1926, Tech won by the same score, and, this year, Anderson's first as head coach, Notre Dame again won by same score, while, in 1924, the score was 40 to 19 in favor of the South Benders. . . . Carnegie and 19 are synonymous with Hunk after that orgy of the figure.

Speaking of giving credit where credit is due, how about clapping hands for Bert Munhall, veteran trainer of the Carnegie Tech football squad, who somehow manages to keep the Plaid's small army of gridders always in the pink and ready for one tough battle after another? . . . Few trainers know their business better than the affable Bertram. . . . Under its trick playoff system, the National Hockey League race this season means even less than in the past, for, with four teams eligible to compete in the playoffs, and Ottawa and Philadelphia withdrawing from the circuit,

GENEVA MEETS WAYNESBURG

A victory today for Waynesburg over the Covenanters will put the Yellow Jackets in position to claim at least a tie for the Class B championship, no matter how Geneva and Allegheny come out next week. The Jackets are unbeaten, and if they get past today's tussle, figure to remain so. Geneva, trounced by Franklin and Marshall last week, will present somewhat of a crippled lineup.

West Virginia Wesleyan, with a scoreless tie with Navy last week to buoy their hopes, and with the great Cliff Battles in great form, has a fine chance of knocking off the Mountaineers this afternoon, something a Wesleyan eleven has not done for 14 years. The Mountaineers already have lost four out of six games, and are no better than even choices against Cebe Ross' well-drilled aggregation of Bobcats.

Thiel and Westminster meet for the twenty-ninth time, with the Lutherans slight favorites to defeat the United Presbyterians. Grove City, tied last week by Allegheny, takes on John Carroll at Cleveland, and Allegheny meets a tough one in St. Bonaventure at Olean, N. Y.

Wash-Jeff, still on the road, hopes to break its two-game losing streak by beating a formidable Marquette eleven at Milwaukee, but undoubtedly will experience the greatest difficulty in doing so.

St. Francis and St. Vincent are idle, but will stage practice games with their reserves in preparation for their annual Armistice Day clash at Latrobe next week.

to be such. Pregame dope has gone wild so often in Pitt-Tech games before this that it may be discounted here and now, and the prediction made that the boys will stage a rip-snorting ball game in the Stadium this afternoon.

Both squads are minus regulars, both on the line and in the backfield. Johnny Luch has a bum leg and can't be in there for Pitt and Jerry O'Toole, the Skibo back, is flat on his back in Presbyterian Hospital. Hart Morris, Pitt's crack right guard, suffered a broken hand in the Notre Dame contest, and it hasn't healed sufficiently to warrant his being used. Heitner, Tech's right guard, injured his knee against the Irish last week, and has been definitely announced as out for today.

Pitt's record to date is far more impressive than that of the Skibos. The Panthers sank Miami, Iowa, West Virginia and Western Reserve, without being scored on, too, before losing a viciously fought game to Notre Dame. Then the Panthers picked up where they'd left off by crushing poor Penn State last week, using only second, third and fourth stringers.

TECH RECORD POOR

Carnegie defeated Buffalo in its inaugural, lost to Wash-Jeff, came back to beat Georgia Tech, and then bowed to Purdue and Notre Dame. Pitt put up a better battle against the high-powered Irish than did the Tartans, which they should have done, having an edge in first string and reserve strength.

The starting Tech lineup today will have Red Stewart and young Tony Ostrosky at the ends, Ostrosky is filling in for Lib Lewis, who suffered a broken right leg against Notre Dame last Saturday. Ostrosky has a man-sized task ahead of him. Don Fletcher and Forsman will go at the tackles and the veteran Hooks Sample will be at left guard, with Tony Kebe on the right side of the line in the place of Heinzer. Duke Ducanis, the senior center, will be over the ball.

In the backfield, Coaches Steffen and Waddell will use Dueger at quarter, with Capt. Armentrout and Kavel at the halves, and Bert Pouncey, the Southerner, at fullback. Armentrout will do the kicking and will help Dueger with the passing.

HOGAN AT QUARTER

Bobby Hogan is to be in there at quarter, with Warren Heller, the star of the Notre Dame games, and Paul Reider at the halves, and Jimmy Boy Clark at full.

Both squads were hustled out of town for last-minute preparations, the Tartans leaving after a final drill in the Tech Bowl last night, and Pitt departing Thursday evening. Both will be kept in seclusion until shortly before game time.

Just to show the degree of seriousness with which Pitt is taking the game, the student body

TECH HARRIERS OPPOSE PITT

Pitt's cross-country runners will be pretty well acquainted with the Schenley Park scenery by 2 o'clock this afternoon.

Shortly before noon today, the varsity and freshman teams of Pitt and Tech meet in cross-country races over the Schenley greensward and paths, and at 1 o'clock this afternoon the Panther under and upper-classmen were to be a part of a field of 31 entrants who are to fight it out for the senior Allegheny Mountain Association hill-and-dale championship over a course of approximately six and one-half miles.

Neither Woodward Adams, P. A. A. star who won the A. M. A. individual title last year, nor the P. A. A. group which annexed the team trophy, are to defend their laurels today. But the field is not at all lacking in strength, and a new record to supplant the mark of 27 minutes 32 3-5 seconds, established by Gus Moore, former Pitt star, is well within the realm of possibility.

M'KEESPORT FACES TEST IN NEW CASTLE

By JULIUS LEVIN

Contenders for the W. P. I. A. L. football championship face important tasks today in their fight to remain in the running for the district laurels.

Coach Rusty Lomond's undefeated and unscored on Midland machine goes after its eighth straight victory by engaging Nate Lippe's Aliquippa combine at Midland. Lippe's team furnished a big upset last week when it held the powerful Ambridge team to a scoreless deadlock.

TUBERS FACE TEST

At New Castle Bill Sullivan's undefeated McKeesport High eleven faces its toughest test of the season in Phil Bridenbaugh's Lawrence County team. The Tubers have scored six straight victories without allowing the opposition to register a point.

Washington, Coach Day's contender for the championship, enjoys a day of rest, as will Turtle Creek Union. These teams meet in Washington next Saturday.

One of the feature attractions of today's card finds Shady Side Academy, defending champion in the Tristate Prep School League, opposed to Nichols School, of Buffalo, in its first bid to retain the crown. The two schools also were scheduled to meet at soccer. Next Saturday, Shady Side will oppose University School, of Cleveland, in Cleveland.

1921—Shadyside	27	Nichols	0
1922—Shadyside	0	Nichols	20
1923—Shadyside	0	Nichols	35
1924—Shadyside	6	Nichols	14

PIMLICO MUTUELS

LOCAL-OWNED ENTRY HORSE SHOW VICTOR

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—(AP.)—The forty-sixth national horse show began to take on the aspect of an affair arranged for New England owned stables as equine bluebloods from that section continued their sweep through the Madison Square Garden arena.

The stables of H. Hollen Crocker, of Boston; Hugh Bancroft, Jr., of Cohasset, and J. Macy Willets' Casallis Farm, of New Marlboro, Mass., dominated yesterday's program.

The Casallis Farm took command with Miss Freda. It first defeated the harness ponies under 13.2, and then came back to win a blue ribbon over ponies not exceeding 14.2.

PRINCE H. WINS

Bancroft sent out Pre-Dennis, a veteran jumper, to win one of the longest drawn out events in the history of the national show. Crowell won with Sir Conrad in a small but classy field of qualified hunters.

Mrs. Simon Patterson, of Pittsburgh, won a second leg on the second John R. Townsend Memorial Cup, riding Prince H, to victory over the jumps. Prince H won the first leg on the cup at the Rochester, N. Y., show. The first Townsend cup was retired last year by Miss Ruth Cowan, of Montreal.

Beau King, ace of G. Berry Beaumont's Bryn Mawr, (Pa.) string of five-gaited saddle horses, was the second outstanding horse of the day. Shown under saddle he easily defeated two rival stallions and then placed second to Miss Jane Henderson's Mountain Maiden, of Eatontown, N. J., in the division for model saddle horses over 14.2.

U. S. A. PLACES FIRST

Once again exposing its threat for international military honors, the United States Army placed first, second and fourth in the handy-A jumping event that brought out 23 picked horses from the civilian and Army stables of five nations. Third went to Hugh Bancroft, Jr.'s veteran fence, Fairfax, after a jump-off.

The Canadian army team came in for minor honors in the class for lady's green or qualified hunters, scoring with Lieut. W. M. Clelland's Margot.

The stable of Mrs. John R. Thompson, Jr., won its second leg on the Killearn Arm Challenge Trophy when Melbourne Swell, a pony standing only 12 hands high, accounted for the event for the second consecutive year.

TECH PRIMED FOR PITT

met in a rousing pep meeting yesterday noon at Ruskin Field, Oakland, at which the university band and the R. O. T. C. organization turned out in full force. Pitt knows better than to take any Tech football game without a grain of salt.

PITT RESERVES STRONG

If a couple of touchdowns can be acquired during the first half, Coach Sutherland probably will use his strong second eleven plenty during the third and fourth quarters, as it is his desire to have his varsity in tip-top trim for the game with Army here next week. The Pitt second team is a formidable outfit.

Nine of the starting eleven of Pitt saw service in the 7-6 game with Carnegie last year. Seven starting Skibos played against the Panthers a year back.

The Tipoff

Jakie Bjoren, the well known Westmoreland County constable, has assembled a crackerjack all-star football team to meet the McKeesport Olympics in a big charity tilt at Greensburg Nov. 26. Jakie himself is a former pro grid star and he used his old cronies in lining up a team. Here are a few of the boys who are to perform for Jake:

The starting lineup for the all-stars probably will have Hibbitt and Guarino at the ends; Shuler and Geiss at the tackles; Dresher and Bollinger at the guards and Rigan at center, with Clark, DeMaio, Klaiber and McCue in the backfield.

The Olympics, with Nat Reed, Bull Russo and others playing, will be at full strength. The contest ought to be a humdinger. Every cent of the proceeds will be turned over to charity.

The big game the Army boasts in football has failed so far to impress local nations for the boys want seven points or better before they'll lay it on the line against the Panthers. The advance sale for this game has been puny, but it is the sort of a contest that may draw a capacity mob should the weather is propitious the day of the game.

BROUILLARD GETS BOUT

BOSTON, Nov. 7.—(AP.)—Lou Brouillard will make his first start as welterweight champion against Andy Callahan of Lawrence in a 10-round semi-title bout at the Boston Garden on November 27. Both battlers have signed to make 147½ pounds and each posted $2,500 forfeit with Matchmaker Bill Ahern.

STEFEC IS WINNER

DETROIT, Nov. 7.—Steve Stefec, of Uniontown, Pa., defeated Wilbur Horvath, of Michigan, in one of the three-round amateur bouts staged here last night for the unemployment fund. They are welterweights.

WEST PENN SOCCER CUP TILTS TODAY

By TOM BIRKS

Four games will be played on local soccer fields this afternoon. Two are to be staged in the West Penn cup competition and two in the Central League.

The big game finds the Cecil Club, of the Keystone League, clashing with Clan Douglas, at the Westinghouse High School Stadium, and a record crowd should be on hand.

At Houston, the Panhandle outfit will clash with the Gallatin Braves.

In the Central League, the Green and White-clad Celtics will find tough opposition at Swissvale where the Westinghouse Club is to be met. The Valley team has found its form; it deserved a better break against the Switch eleven.

Jack Campbell will take his Union Switch outfit, in an effort to garner two more points against the Tarentum club. It should be easy sailing for Angus McNair and his boys.

PENN TO TEST NOTRE DAME

SOUTH BEND, Nov. 7.—(AP.)—The Pennsylvania football team which is in South Bend today with the avowed intention of whipping Notre Dame may cause the Irish more trouble than other opponents this season, but almost everyone around here, except the Quakers, figure it will be just one more Notre Dame triumph.

The Penn squad engaged in a brisk limbering up drill in the new brick stadium yesterday, then went to Niles, Mich., for quiet and solitude on the eve of the contest.

Penn expects to start its most powerful front, with Smith at quarter, Munger and Gette at halves, and Carl Perina, the 204-pound line crasher, at fullback. In reserve will be Onderdonk, Ford and Lewis.

Neither eleven has been defeated, but the record of the Irish is more impressive. The attendance was expected to reach 40,000. The probable lineup:

Pennsylvania		Notre Dame
Raffel	L. E.	Koken
Shields	L. T.	Culver
Talkowski	L. G.	Harris
Richmond	C.	Tarr
Smith	R. G.	Hoffman
Clothier	R. T.	Kurth
Ribelin	R. E.	Mahoney
Munger	Q.	Jaskwich
Gette	L. H.	Schwartz
Perina	F.	Melchiorre

WALKER TURNS DOWN STRIB

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—(AP.)—Mickey Walker, the pride of Rumson, N. J., has decided he'd prefer not to tangle with Young Stribling, at least not until after he has had a shot at Max Schmeling's heavyweight championship.

Negotiations for a match between Stribling and Walker in Madison Square Garden, December 11, ended abruptly yesterday, when Jack Kearns, Walker's manager, declined to consider the match at this time.

Walker expects to sign for a match with Schmeling soon, the bout to take place either in Miami, Fla., Los Angeles or Atlantic City. Schmeling himself has indicated that he would like to meet Walker, who recently held Jack Sharkey to a draw.

LEONARD HELD TO DRAW

BURLINGTON, Vt., Nov. 7.—(AP.)—Benny Leonard, former lightweight boxing champion of the world, fought Ray Cromer, of Burlington, knocking no contests, last night and the best he could pull from their battle was a draw. Leonard was declared to the ring from an adjoining section in the fifth, and both fighters were standing at the finish of the 10-round bout. Leonard weighed 147, Cromer 151.

TROJACK VICTOR

GRAND FORKS, N. D., Nov. 7.—(AP.)—Steve Trojack, Winnipeg heavyweight, outpointed Loraine Udell, of Aberdeen, S. D., in the six-round main event here last night.

PARKS (EXTREME RIGHT) CRASHES THROUGH TACKLE FOR TEAM'S THIRD TALLY

Ambridge High School's football team easily defeated Stowe Township in their tussle on the Stowe field yesterday. Prior to this game neither team had suffered a reverse, but Ambridge had figured in two scoreless ties and Stowe in one. A forward pass placed the ball on the four-yard line just before the above touchdown was made.

TRACEY-MOORE GO A REPEAT

By HARRY KECK

Sports Editor.

Have you heard of the local middleweight triumvirate that meets in the ring occasionally in spite of itself?

They are Jimmy Moore, Jack Tracey and Tiger West.

Moore has beaten West twice, once in Detroit and another time in Motor Square Garden, when he fought as a substitute.

Tracey has beaten Moore.

Now, Moore has been challenging and rechallenging West recently and West finally had to agree to box him again. They were signed for the eight-round semi-final to the Buck McTiernan-Ben Jeby bout at Motor Square Garden next Monday night, but West fell ill again a few days ago and canceled, and the club signed Tracey to fill his place. Now, it so happens that Tracey, North Side Negro, formerly of Louisville, has been just as anxious to take on Moore again as Jimmy has been to hook up with West again.

In other words, it is said West wanted no more of Moore and Moore wanted no more of Tracey, and it winds up with Tracey the only man apparently satisfied.

McTiernan ends his hard training today for his feature battle. Jeby is due to arrive in town tomorrow morning and will work out in the afternoon at the Garden.

Between Rounds

Both Motor Square Garden and McKees port are after the services of Pat Mike Cavanaugh, New York youngster, who punished one at the hands last Monday night. Art Lesser, matchmaker for the club, is being advised managed by Jackie Lightfoot.

The Mickey Duca-Eddie Brannon show scheduled at Johnstown Monday night has been set back a week due to a hand injury suffered by Duca.

Andre Meyers has signed Billy Rose, of Cincinnati, and Ruby Leabres, of Syracuse, for the 10-round windup of his opening show in the Castle Rout, New Castle, next Friday night.

The Charley Baxter-Battling Bulahan bout in Cleveland will go on next Friday night, Jack Dempsey and Joe Rolland are in the semi-final.

The boxing show planned for Morgantown, W. Va., next Monday night is off. The armory there will not be ready for boxing for several more weeks.

Deglane Is Listed As 'Unavailable'

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 7.—(AP.)—The Pennsylvania State Athletic Commission has placed Henri Deglane, champion of the Paul Bowser faction of the heavyweight wrestling profession, on the "unavailable" list for refusing to agree to a match here with Jim Londos, who is the champion officially recognized by the Pennsylvania and New York commissions.

Deglane is not licensed in this state, and therefore could not be suspended. The Londos-Deglane match was proposed by the commission last week and representatives of the two grapplers were invited to the meeting, but only Londos' representative appeared. Deglane's refusal to enter into negotiations was conveyed in a letter from a New York promoter.

CHICAGOANS FAVORED IN EXHIBITION

By CARL W. SHATTO

At least several hundred, or possibly a few thousand local hockey fans will be out to assist Coach Charley Reid in seeing how the members of the 1931-32 Yellow Jacket squad stand up under the fire of competition when the local International League skaters meet the Chicago Hawks, runners-up for the National League championship last season, in an exhibition game at Duquesne Garden at 8:30 tonight.

Because of the Chicagoans' greater numbers, experience and skill and because of the fact that most of the local puckmen have been in training only since last Wednesday, the National Leaguers figure to make off with most of the laurels, but the game should provide a fine test of Pittsburgh material—both old and new.

TWO NEWCOMERS START

Two newcomers will appear in the Pittsburgh starting lineup, in the persons of Ty Arbour and Frank Ingram, who are to flank Center Eddie Rodden on the front line. Gordy Fraser and Art Berlett, two big boys who already have met many tough tests successfully, will be at the defense points, and Albie Cox, small of stature, but big in the matter of ability, will be in the cage.

Tex White, Whitey Fields and Milt Halliday, three lads who performed valiant service in shoving Pittsburgh into a play-off berth late last season, will comprise the first reserve line, but when the second relief forward trio appears on the ice two more new Jackets will be introduced in the persons of Louis Holmes, at center, and Norman Locking, at left wing. Capt. Tory Gregg, who paced the locals in scoring last season, will be at right wing.

MATTE RELIEF STAR

Armour, Ingram, Locking and Holmes all were obtained from the Chicago club. Arbour and Ingram are veterans of several National League campaigns, and Locking and Holmes are younger men whose ambition makes up for lack of experience. They figure to give the Pittsburgh club an increased scoring punch, and Coach Reid hopes that the extent of the increase will become apparent in tonight's fight.

Joe Matte, recalled from the Jackets' Niagara Falls farm, will provide relief for Berlett at right defense, and Fields will be moved into Fraser's position whenever Gordy sends out a distress signal.

Eddie Ouellette and Cam Proudlock, forwards of more than average ability, both well known to local fans, will see service tonight, and probably will be moved into regular berths as soon as they attain top condition.

GARDNER GREAT GOALIE

Jerry Lowrey, who paced the Pittsburgh club in scoring in the 1929-30 race, when the local icemen were entered in the National League, Left Wing Johnny Gottselig, Defenseman Taffy Abel and Goalie Chuck Gardner are Hawks who will command much attention. Gottselig is regarded as the best left wing in the game, and if there is a goal guardian better than Gardner he has not yet been found. Abel, who tips the beam at slightly less than one ton, is the biggest man who is paid for wearing skates.

Other Chicago "big shots" are too numerous to mention.

The Hawks started drilling here more than two weeks before the Jackets arrived, and their condition is much superior to that of the locals, and the major leaguers should win by a margin of four or five goals.

PLAY AGAIN TUESDAY

The Hawks will put the Jackets to another test here Tuesday, and by the time the Syracuse Stars appear to open the International League title race Thursday of next week, Coach Reid should have the weak links pretty well singled out. The probable lineup:

Pittsburgh		Chicago
Fox	G.	Gardner
Fraser	L. D.	Wentworth
Berlett	R. D.	Abel
Rodden	C.	Cook
Arbour	L. W.	Adams
Ingram	R. W.	Marsh

COAST LEAGUE DISBANDS

VANCOUVER, B. C., Nov. 7.—(AP.)—The Pacific Coast Hockey League will not operate this year, Frank Patrick, president of the professional loop has announced.

The league has operated for three years as a four-team circuit, first with Vancouver, Seattle, Portland and Victoria as members and later with Tacoma in place of Victoria. Tacoma started the season last year—but dropped out before the end. Seattle's team recently was disbanded.

CANADIENS SIGN MONROE

MONTREAL, Nov. 7.—(AP.)—Dune Monroe, former playing manager of the Montreal Maroons, has signed with the Canadiens, National Hockey League and world champions.

only one team in each half of the loop can fail to land what is jocularly called a "money berth." . . . When greater impositions on the public are perpetrated than these playoffs, leave it to the hockey leagues to think them up—HARRY KECK.

Don't Mistake Friendship For Romance

Bob complained that he couldn't date a girl out more than a time or two—

Before she began to get the notion that he was interested in her in a big way—and acted like she owned him.

Which made Bob plenty peeved, because he had no intention of getting married, maybe for years . . and all he wanted was someone to pal around with.

"All the girls are alike!" he cried.

But here's one who isn't . . . and she's afflicted with the same trouble Bob has!

"Dear Sally:

"I haven't any particular problem, except I just read Bob's letter about the way the gals always expect him to 'go serious' after he's dated them out a few times, and I want him to know that here's one who isn't like that.

"And curiously enough, I'm bothered with boys who seem to feel the same way about me that his 'dates' felt about him. I have just the same difficulties with boys that he complains about concerning girls.

"Bob suggests that all girls are 'out to get their man.' Well, I'm not. And I knew a few boys who knew how to be just friends with a girl. I find that, when I go out with them a few times, and just begin to feel that I know them, and can enjoy their company, the next thing is that they get serious.

NOT READY TO MARRY

"Then the fellow, in nearly every case, takes it as a personal insult that any girl should go out with him and not fall hard for him.

"Is that sensible? I ask you!

"I like to be with boys. I think they're interesting, and I like to talk to them. But I'm young. I'm not through school yet. And I want to work, and to look around a little before I marry. I don't want to just marry the first fellow who comes along. And I certainly don't expect to put on a love affair with every boy I meet. I think it is silly. And I don't think any really fastidious girl, with a high ideal of what love really means, will go in for that sort of thing. You'd think that boys would appreciate that sort of a feeling. But no! They don't seem to. They get mad right away when you won't get sentimental. And that makes me tired! Why should any boy think that every girl he gets a little interested in should fall for him! And why should he feel insulted when she doesn't.

NO DISCREDIT

"My goodness! There are just scads of fellows we like and even admire, that we couldn't fall in love with. So why can't we all be good friends? Why can't a boy understand that it's no discredit for a girl to like him, and yet not love him? I just can't understand it. I wonder if some of the boys can't give me a clue. It certainly has me puzzled. "RUBY."

Well, can you, boys?

Do all of you feel belittled, and get sore, because the girl friend may like to talk to you, and still not feel romantic about you?

If so, why so?

Can't you take the fact that her heart doesn't go pit-pat over you, like a good sport, and still be good friends?

"LINGER, OH GENTLE TIME!" -:- -:- -:- Drawn by Nell Brinkley

TIME is the only guest the host and hostess never wearies of! The only old man, ancient beyond imagining, whose limbs are hard and strong, who never tires, who hurries with all the dash and honest haste of a young man. We love LOVE, and clutch his beating wings, but with never the madness and heart-aches and the urgency that we do Time's ancient old skirts!

The lady-flowers of the world are forever at his heels, rubbing cream on their faces, and importuning him with shrill voices. "Linger, oh Gentle Time, and tread noiselessly on our beauty. No wrinkles, oh good Father Time!"

For children Time loiters, but each year he hurries faster, and many a wise child knows the delights of the world that he, a child lives in—and doesn't want "to grow up." When I was a child I knew my days were rare and glamorous, and that Time brought duties that went only with adult days.

For the lover of pictured and written beauty, Time is a terrible old man, and a wonderful old man. More terrible in his hurry than the most nervous modern skyscraper dweller. More wonderful than Youth itself, who is scattered and lost by Time "Think," says the reader and the gazer, "of all the books that will be left in the world to read when I can no longer be here to read them: of all the pictures that I will never get Time to see! Oh, heaven, grant me more Time!"

That is why, because he never lingers, that while we clutch his gown and delay him all we can, we must make the most of him, and his minutes and hours, using them for happiness, and laughter, and good looks at the things of starry beauty, for kindness, work and LOVE. —NELL BRINKLEY.

Correct Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

Engraved Cards

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. Should one take out the tissue paper from an invitation to a wedding or graduation?

2. When one is at a wedding, is it permissible to congratulate the groom, even though one has not been introduced to him? The bride in this case is a relative.

3. I shall be very glad to know your criticism on this letter.

D. F.

1. There is a never-ending discussion and argument about this point, and no one has ever really made the final judgment. Most engravers maintain that it is best to include the tissue because then the engraving is protected. And many stationers agree with this.

Personally I believe that the harmony of the invitation or announcement is destroyed when the tissue is sent with the sheet. It gives an unfinished look to the whole. If the invitations or announcements are ordered long enough in advance, and if the engraver uses the right kind of ink in his engraving, and if the engraving is carefully done, there is no reason why they should not be dry in a few days, thoroughly dry, and then it is not necessary to keep the tissue in.

2. Yes, we always congratulate the groom, even if we do not know him. The fact that we are in the reception line of friends gives us this privilege, and especially if the bride is a relative.

3. Your letter-form is excellent . . . perfect. And how glad I am to have the signature of a married woman so perfectly done! Your handwriting is most interesting and carefully spaced on the adequately-proportioned letter-paper.

Announcing the Secret Wedding

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Is it correct to send out marriage announcements after having been married two months, but having kept the marriage a secret for that time? D.

It isn't particularly good form to send out announcements so long after the ceremony has been performed, and when the wedding has been so unconventional. Such belated announcements serve too much to emphasize the unconventionality of the marriage. It is better, in this case to tell those relatives and friends who live near enough to tell, and to write informal notes to those farther away. The news will be spread fast enough, and then the people who matter in the lives of the couple will know of the marriage.

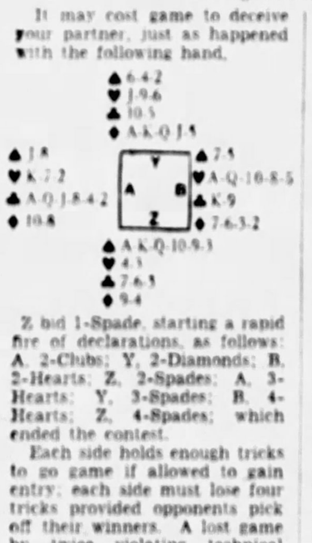
Contract Bridge -:- OFFICIAL SYSTEM As Adopted by Leading Authorities

By E. V. SHEPARD

Play Them Straight

It may cost game to deceive your partner, just as happened with the following hand.



Z bid 1-Spade, starting a rapid fire of declarations, as follows: A, 2-Clubs; Y, 2-Diamonds; B, 2-Hearts; Z, 2-Spades; A, 3-Hearts; Y, 3-Spades; B, 4-Hearts; Z, 4-Spades; which ended the contest.

Each side holds enough tricks to go game if allowed to gain entry; each side must lose four tricks provided opponents pick off their winners. A lost game by twice violating technical rules. He led down the king of hearts as his opening lead, and held the trick; B played his 8 as a come-on. Instead of playing his cards in regular downward order, A led his partner the 2 of hearts, whereas he should have led the 7. B won the trick and led back the king of clubs, leaving B still in the lead. A should have dropped his 8, stating by his play of an unnecessarily high card that he wished B to lead back clubs; instead of doing that A played the 2. It is insufficient to have bid a suit; when your partner leads a winning card of your suit you must tell him by your play whether you wish him to continue leading your suit or to shift to another suit.

A had twice deceived his partner; first by leading the highest missing card of partner's hearts, followed by the lowest missing card of that suit. Next A had by his play of the lowest card of his own suit directed his partner not to lead another club. The inference appeared clear to B: his partner must be able to trump the third round of hearts, so B led back his ace in expectation of defeating the contract two tricks. Of course Z trumped the lead; pulled trumps, then discarded his losing club upon Y's established diamonds, fulfilling his game contract.

Many otherwise excellent players neglect elementary rules. To successfully cope with the nicer points of the game students first must automatically observe all primary rules.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Competent Care Assures Diabetic Full Life Span

In the treatment of diabetes great progress has been made in the past 10 years. Really the results of modern care are most gratifying.

Dr. Copeland

In 1922, if a patient was informed that he had diabetes, he was miserable indeed. His expectation of life would have been estimated at not more than six years. Nowadays a patient with diabetes can be told with confidence that his expectation of life is practically the same as that of an individual without diabetes. In fact, many diabetics, as a result of their careful methods of living, are outliving non-diabetics.

Of course, the chief factor in the treatment of diabetes is a suitable diet. However, one cannot afford to neglect the tremendous worth of insulin. This discovery has had much to do with the control of this disease. It is out of the question to consider diabetes a disease that can be dealt with without the aid and supervision of a physician. This care must be exercised by a private physician or in the diabetic clinic.

There are various rules and directions with which diabetics should be familiar. The most important thing to know is that persons taking insulin must do so regularly. The only time that insulin need not be taken is when there is no sugar in the urine. Even then it should not be omitted unless the doctor has given instructions to that effect.

At all times stick to your diet and never break it. If you have an infection and there is pus present, that must have special attention.

If at any time the diabetic feels sick, especially if he has fever, is sick at the stomach or actually vomits, or has pain in the abdomen, he should go to bed at once. The doctor should be called. In the meantime it is well to give him a cup of tea or coffee.

If there is any delay in the arrival of the physician, at least half the regular diet should be omitted. There may be substituted for it orange juice or oatmeal gruel. Stay with the patient until the doctor arrives.

Every diabetic becomes familiar with the method of testing the urine for sugar. It is a simple procedure and can be done at home if your physician approves. The test may give warning of the need of special care.

Let me warn against the quack and proprietary medicines advertised for diabetes. There is no pill or tablet that can be bought which will cure or assist in the treatment of diabetes. Please remember this and never be tempted to try any of the passing fads.

The physician who is interested in your welfare will know of any new discovery that has been made. The greatest advance that has been made in the medical treatment of diabetes is the discovery of insulin. This should only be given under the instruction and advice of a physician.

I have said a lot in this article about the importance of personal medical care. I have done so deliberately, because I have observed too many persons trusting to their own devices. This is a mistake, because with competent care the diabetic can live out the normal expectation of life. To trust to self-medication is all wrong.

Household Hints

Shoes should not be kept in boxes after they have been worn because they require air to preserve them.

When matches are damp and refuse to ignite you can always dry them by rubbing them back and forth vigorously in a clothes brush.

Jellies will set much more quickly if the mold is placed in a basin of cold water to which a handful each of coarse salt and washing soda have been added. The mold should be rinsed in cold water or brushed with olive oil before the mixture is poured into it.

Heart of a Wife -:- -:- Continuation of Love's Reawakening

By ADELE GARRISON

Madge Waits at Ticer's for Word From Miss Halkett

There was that in Sam Ticer's face and eyes, as his wife announced that she herself was going to the farmhouse to tell my father of the Chinese skulking in the thicket, which warned me that the particular form of domestic unpleasantness known as a "family row" was imminent. Nor could I find it in my heart to blame the harassed nominal head of the house of Ticer, although my sympathies are usually with his wife. But my good neighbor, like most other unusually placid and good-tempered women, can outdo the most accomplished nagger when she gets sufficiently irritated, and her husband's stupidity in the matter of the rice paper with the Chinese inscription which he had found upon the cushion of my automobile had given her the opportunity to vent her righteous but ill-timed indignation upon his luckless head. No man with spirit could have helped resenting her tirade, and I knew that Mrs. Ticer's ordinarily easy-going husband could show a pretty temper of his own when he chose to unleash it.

"I've had enough of this foolishness," he said, his face crimsoning. "I'll let you know, once for all, who's—"

"Oh! Mr. Ticer!" I tried to let no consciousness of his choler appear in my face or voice. "I ought to tell you why I asked Mrs. Ticer if you couldn't stay here while she went over to the farmhouse. I have to stay here for a little while—I'll tell you why presently—and I'm so nervous—I'd feel safer with you around. I do hope you'll let her go."

I devoutly hoped the recording angel had his celestial fountain pen engaged in some other corner of the universe than the Ticer farmhouse. For I would back Mrs. Ticer's ability to repel marauders against any of her husband any day of the year. With a rolling pin, a fire poker and a teakettle of boiling water, I think she could repel a siege.

"Why, I'd jest as soon stay here," he said, and I guessed that he was secretly glad of the way out which I had afforded him. "And don't you worry none, Mis' Graham. Nobody nor nothin'll bother you while I'm here."

"Oh! I know that," I assented promptly. "I couldn't worry with you around. I'm sorry I have to stay here. I could save Mrs. Ticer the trip to the farmhouse. But I didn't know how long you would have to be with the car and I couldn't get my telephone connection, so Mrs. Ticer kindly permitted me to wait here for it."

"I'd like to see you trying to do anything else," Mrs. Ticer reiterated her hospitable indignation of a few minutes before. "Now Ticer, Mis' Graham wants to write a note—"

"An' I supose you want me to get out," he grinned, his good humor evidently restored. "All right, I'll go out and finish my chores. Say, You lock up when you go, all but the back door, and have Mis' Graham lock that after you. I'll be right outside in the garden, them onions want weedin', and she can call me out of the window if she needs me."

"I'll tend to all that," his wife said impatiently, and heaved a sigh from her toes when her husband finally had made his leisurely way out of the house.

"That man would make a saint tear his shirt," she said, "he takes so much time gettin' from one place to another. Now you finish your note while I make your coffee. Then I'll go over to your house, and you can drink your coffee at your leisure while you're waiting for your 'phone call."

She bustled out into the kitchen, and, resolutely turning my thoughts away from the rice paper with the Chinese inscription which I had thrust into my bag, I took out my pen again and finished my brief note to Lillian.

"Dear Lillian," it ran. "Mrs. Ticer will give you this so that you, but no one else, will know where I am. I had a blowout just past the Ticer house, so I went back and telephoned from there. But Miss Halkett has not yet come in, so I have left a message and am waiting here for the call. Mr. Ticer is weeding outside the windows, so I can call him if I need anything. Mrs. Ticer has a message for Father, but you are not to worry. Everything is all right. Better destroy this. Will come home the minute I get my call.

"Affectionately, Madge."

I folded the note and put it in the envelope, wrote Lillian's name upon it and then lay back with my eyes closed, utterly spent. The next thing I knew Mrs. Ticer was saying, "Mis' Graham! Mis' Graham!" in a frightened voice, and I opened my eyes to see her anxious face bending over me.

"You was so white," you scared me," she said. "Are you all right?"

"Perfectly," I told her with an effort. "I just dropped off to sleep, I fancy. "Oh, what a wonderful odor your coffee has."

She had set down a tray on the table near me with coffee, cream, sugar, butter, doughnuts and some of her locally famous "raised biscuits."

"Well, if you're hungry, I won't worry any longer," she said, relieved, and after locking up, departed. But when I had locked the door after her, I did not pour my coffee immediately. Instead I took out the rice paper and scanned it feverishly.

Let the Child Explain

By CONSTANCE CAMERON

Mother had gotten little 8-year-old Bobby into clean clothes, inspected his ears and neck, and found him in good shape to go downtown with her to get new school shoes. Turning him loose from the unwelcome ministrations in the cause of cleanliness, she warned him to keep clean until she made herself ready to go.

Out went Bobby into the backyard, with the best intentions in the world. An alley runs past the yard, and it had rained steadily the night before, making soup of the usually dusty lane out there. An automobile horn sounded, it tooted again, and Bobby got a flash of his little chum's dog blissfully nosing around and about to be run over. The driver stopped with a screech of brakes, but the dog didn't sense the thing which had all but happened to him.

"Get your dog out of the road!" yelled the irritated car owner, and Bobby DID. Now picking up a small dog who is covered with mud isn't guaranteed to improve a small boy's looks. And it didn't improve Bobby's.

But he got the dog safely home to its owner, then rushed home breathlessly and a little scared at his bedraggled appearance.

The mother took one look at him and blazed into an angry tirade. He'd go to bed, that's what he'd do, and there would be no more new shoes all that week. The child cried and kept trying to tell her what had happened, but was stopped by the mother's firm: "I don't want to hear a thing about it! I told you to keep clean and in five minutes you are a disgrace."

"But—but Tim's dog—"

"Keep still, I tell you. Don't talk back to me. Get your clothes off and get into bed."

Fair? Hardly. Yet so often we hear parents stop an explanation at its birth. Each of us has a right to a hearing. We demand a fair hearing, a just trial. Why don't children rate the same justice?

LISTEN to your child's explanation. You can tell speedily whether it is an alibi or a true outline of what has happened. But be square enough to at least let him give you HIS side of it.

Personally, it seems a great deal more important to me that a little boy was kind to a muddy dog, than that he should keep spotless and feel that his cleanliness rates higher in the scheme of things than giving aid to an animal.

STOP THAT COLD

DISTRESSING cold in chest or throat—that so often leads to something serious—generally responds to good old Musterole with the first application. Should be more effective if used once every hour for five hours.

This famous blend of oil of mustard, camphor, menthol and other helpful ingredients brings relief naturally. Musterole gets action because it is a scientific "counter-irritant"—not just a salve—it penetrates and stimulates blood circulation, helps to draw out infection and pain. Used by millions for 20 years. Recommended by doctors and nurses.

To Mothers—Musterole is also made in milder form for babies and small children. Ask for Children's Musterole.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

Round shoulders are due to ill health, lowered vitality or poor musculatory structure. The habit of throwing the head forward is often responsible. By carrying the chest high, posture takes care of itself.

Don't fail to do your morning stretching. It is the greatest of all youthifiers, keeps the figure from taking on humps and bumps suggestive of advancing years. Lie on the back, make arms and legs long. Stretch to the uttermost limit. Stretch fingers and toes. Easy exercise for lazy loafers who are in need of muscle toning.

What most beauty-questing women need is a sure-fire worry cure. Worry is devastating, not only to the contour of the facial padding, but to the digestive organs and the central nervous system. All unpleasant emotions upset the physical mechanism. They dig ditches between eyes, pull down lip corners, cause tissues to lose tone. They are destructive forces.

There are plenty of foods that the plumpish girl can eat that will satisfy her appetite and not add one ounce to weight. Potatoes are starchy, therefore should be avoided, but all the other vegetables are safe. Lean meats are to be preferred to fat ones, except bacon, from which the fat is cooked. Sweets are adipose makers, so go slow on bonbons.

Because of this hectic, modern life of ours, in which everybody rushes, hurries, gallops, tears along as if pursued by demons the complexion has gone on strike. Texture is good, better than in great-grandma's day, but blushes simply aren't there. Few young things show cheeks that are rich and vivid with natural coloring. Late hours and tension account for that condition. More attention is paid to health, hygiene, food, bathing and outdoor exercise, yet the pink flush has vanished and the rough compact serves for all ages between 16 and 80.

The Loudspeaker

By LOUIS REID

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—Radio archdukes depend chiefly upon sports contests and City Hall greetings to visiting poohbahs for the major part of their unsponsored microphone fodder.

Gone almost completely, save from independent stations, is the old-time evening sustaining program in which broadcasters sought either to recapture the good will of listeners lost during previous blatant commercial periods or to demonstrate their talent for building novel and interesting microphone offerings.

There are only two or three outstanding sustaining programs at present at night on the networks—Seth Parker, Ernest Hutcheson and the Slumber Hour. The last named has lost much of its original value as entertainment through the melancholy of its announcer and the lugubriousness of its music.

So long as advertisers demand the best evening hours for their programs there can be no return to the policy which once prevailed. Yet, for the good of radio, for the development of its showmen, for the testing of new ideas and forms of entertainment it seems to us that the broadcasters might hold one hour at night in which they could shut the door to propaganda, could paint widely upon its front, "No admittance to commercial sponsors."

Failing that, it seems equally reasonable that they assemble their commercial backers and work out some set of rules that will prevent monotony and sameness creeping into their programs.

It is unlikely, now that broadcasting has attained the status of big business, that the networks will ever go back, even for an hour, to their own productions. But there is nothing to prevent them going into a huddle with their advertisers.

Today, the bought-and-paid-for programs have become so repetitious as to cause a good deal of rebellion in the parlors. The rebellion is growing, has reached the point where more and more radio sets are being silenced save when momentous news or a momentous sport contest is being aired.

The majority of orchestras, save when the big symphonies are performing, sound much the same whether they are concerned with the pieces of Victor Herbert or those of Walker Donaldson. Tin Pan Alley is naturally limited in its output and its current hosannas are played night after night over the air.

* * *

In fact, so identical have radio programs become that a listener might go cruising on half a dozen channels and unless he heard an identifying announcement, imagine he was hearing only one station.

Toledo Auto Firm Recalls 1,500 Men

TOLEDO, O., Nov. 7.—(AP.)—The Chevrolet Motor Ohio Company, after a temporary shutdown for repairs, has reopened its Central avenue plant recalling 1,500 workers, including night and day crews. Indications are that the force will be maintained throughout the winter, officials said.

The Libbey-Owens-Ford Glass Company, it was announced, is adding a few men with indications that there will be a sizeable increase in the force next month.

Rum Bottle Breaker Found During Fire

BERWICK, Pa., Nov. 7.—(AP.)—Firemen entering the home of Samuel Serra to extinguish a blaze found Serra smashing bottles. They called police. The latter hauled away a truck load of alcohol, whisky, gin and wine, they said, and found liquor standing four inches deep in a part of the cellar as the result of Serra's efforts to destroy the evidence. Damage from the fire was estimated by the firemen at $1,500. Police said Serra will be arrested.

ENS MAY GET PILOT JOB ON COAST

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

Jewel Ens, who piloted the Pirates the past two seasons, is the recipient of several rather alluring baseball propositions, but Ens stated today he may not make any definite decision regarding his plans before the December meetings are held.

The owners of two very high-class Double A clubs are believed to be anxious to dicker with the departing boss of the Buccos. Either of these managerial propositions are close to the major league standard and there is a likelihood that Ens may cast his fortunes with one of the clubs mentioned.

Jewel has many close friends who feel he will be back in the major league wheels as a pilot in the course of a few years. From my personal observation I believe that Ens has made the finest kind of an impression in all parts of the country.

ENS WELL LIKED

Ens is highly regarded by baseball officials and newspapermen of the Pacific Coast and the writers throughout the National League are eager to see him stay in baseball for several reasons. They like him personally on account of his keen wit and the fact that he and his Pirates were "good copy."

In the course of his reign as Pirate leader, Ens was visited on the bench by a hundred and one newspapermen and he always tried to send them away with a smile. Even if he had no story he was courteous and as a rule a journalist was able to get some kind of an interesting, gossipy yarn.

There is a report out to the effect that Rogers Hornsby would like to have Ens for an assistant. Fighting the Pirates hard in their California games, the Cubs became admirers of Ens. Hornsby thinks Jewel is a smart baseball man; moreover he probably knows that Ens is admired by the Chicago players.

AID TO JEWEL

Instead of this condition militating against Ens with Hornsby, it appears to enhance him in Rogers' viewpoint, for the Rajah is big enough to have popular assistants about him. In this respect, Hornsby may be a bit like McGraw, who does not fear to employ a managerial prospect as a right bower.

BOJARSKI WINS OVER SMITH

ERIE, Pa., Nov. 7.—Frankie Bojarski, Erie lightweight, chalked up his forty-ninth consecutive victory here last night when he gained a 10-round decision over Steve Smith, rugged Bridgeport, Conn., scrapper.

Bojarski's potent left had Smith on the verge of a kayo in the first round, but after that, the New Englander solved the local boy's style and mixed with him freely, bothering Bojarski with left hooks to the body and snappy rights to the head. It was the toughest fight Bojarski has had here. Bojarski weighed 134, Smith 132.

Jimmy Dean, Erie Negro, and Tony Sciolino, Buffalo Italian, fought to a six-round draw in a bout which saw Dean floored three times in the second round. He staged a great comeback to take the play away from the Buffalo boy and earn an even break. Dean weighed 131, Sciolino the same.

Bobby Vogel, Erie, scored a technical knockout over Frankie Console, Pittsburgh, in the third round of a scheduled six-round bout. Console was out on his feet when the bout was stopped. Vogel weighed 136, Console 131.

Harry Boyle, Meadville, Pa., making his first start as a pro, copped the decision over Johnny Perrine, Buffalo, in a six-rounder. Boyle and Perrine each weighed 119.

65,000 See U. S. Nine Win in Japan

TOKIO, Nov. 7.—(AP.)—Before 65,000 fans who packed the Meiji Shrine Stadium, the baseball team of American major and minor league barnstormers took the series opener, 7-0, today, from St. Paul's University, champion of the Tokio University League.

No one was able to hit a home run, but Al Simmons, of the Philadelphia Athletics, doubled twice.

Minister of Education Tanaka pitched the first ball, and Ambassador W. Cameron Forbes acted as catcher. All tickets to the entire Toki series of several games were sold a week ago. Speculators obtained 40 yen (about $20) for tickets to today's game.

The score:

	R.	H.	E.
Americans	7	7	0
St. Paul's	0	2	4

Rooney-West View Tilt Aids Charity

A score of girls wearing banners, "Surplus for the Needy," will pass through the stands before the game and during the intermission, carrying tin cans, symbolic of the work which the committee has done during the summer and into which spectators will be asked to contribute such spare dimes, quarters, halves and even dollars as they might feel able to afford.

Gridder Outruns Field, Stops at 10-Yard Mark

UNIONTOWN, Nov. 7.—One of the most unusual grid plays of the years was executed, or rather unexecuted, yesterday at Jefferson-Greene County, Mapletown and Jefferson high schools were battling when Jamison, right end for Mapletown, got loose and received a pass from Wolf. He was clear of virtually all of the enemy, and a touchdown was apparent.

Jamison sped down the field to the opponent's 10-yard line. There, for no reason whatever, he grounded the ball, and proudly tossed it to the referee to await trial for the extra point.

Then, to his great dismay, he was informed that he was 10 yards short of the 6-point line. Mapletown lost, 13 to 7.

HOPKINS TOPS AMERICAN U.

BALTIMORE, Nov. 7.—(AP.)—Johns Hopkins University defeated American University, of Washington, 61 to 0, at Homewood last night, rolling up more points than any Hopkins team has scored against any foe since 1924.

A thousand shivering fans watched a first-string team pile up 34 points in the first half and then retire in favor of the substitutes, who chalked up 27 more points in the last half.

CENTRE VICTORIOUS

DANVILLE, Ky., Nov. 7.—(AP.)—Centre College continued its march toward the Southern Intercollegiate Athletic Association title yesterday by defeating Georgetown College, previously unbeaten in conference play, 33 to 6.

MISSOURI COPS

DES MOINES, Ia., Nov. 7.—(AP.)—The University of Missouri's Tigers broke a season-long record of defeat here last night to trounce Drake University's Bulldogs, 32 to 20.

COCHRAN, HOPPE EASILY WIN

Local billiard players again were no match for Welker Cochran, 18.1 world champion, and his foe of next week in title combat, Willie Hoppe, in exhibition matches here last night.

Cochran's high run was 35, Dessau's 7, Hoppe's 100, and Jackson's 6.

S. A. Cohn plays Cochran, at Ueberle's, and John Barnes opposes Hoppe, at the William Penn tonight.

HERMAN GOLF VICTOR

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 7.—(AP.)—Babe Herman, Brooklyn first baseman, who lives in Glendale, Cal., won the baseball players' golf tournament here yesterday. He defeated Speed Martin, formerly with Sacramento, of the Pacific Coast League, but now of San Diego, Cal., 4 and 3, in the final round.

MICHIGAN SHOWS PROFIT

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Nov. 7.—(AP.)—Athletics at the University of Michigan showed a net operating profit of $232,076.78 for the fiscal year 1930-31, the annual report of the Athletic Association submitted to the board of regents reveals. Total receipts for the period amounted to $583,512.92.

TOP FLIGHT FAVORED IN PIMLICO

BALTIMORE, Nov. 7.—(AP.)—Fifteen thoroughbreds are entered for the $40,000-added Pimlico futurity, feature at Old Hilltop today, although it is regarded likely that not more than eight or 10 of the number will start.

Chief of the entries was Top Flight, Cornelius V. Whitney's brilliant 2-year-old daughter of Dis Donc and Flyatit, undefeated in its six starts, making its first appearance on a Maryland track. Top Flight, already holding a heavy advantage in winnings, had a chance to amass the greatest money total ever won by one of its sex.

Top Flight was paired in the entries with Whitney's other good 2-year-old, Mad Prump.

Osculator, winner of the great American stakes, the National Stallion stakes and the Spalding Lowe Jenkins handicap, loomed as the chief threat for the Whitney entry. Tick On, paired with On Post as the Loma Stable entry, also was heavily backed by virtue of victory in the Hopeful and second place in the Richard Johnson and Jenkins.

Other entries were the Nevada Stock Farm's Hygro, E. R. Bradley's Burgoo King, son of Bubbling Over; Lucky Tom, Semaphore, Marmion, Mad Pursuit, Gallant Sir, Overtime, Pompeus, coupled with Osculator as the W. R. Coe entry, and Big Beau.

JACK CHESBRO, EX-BUC, DIES

CONWAY, Mass., Nov. 7.—(AP.)—Happy Jack Chesbro, famous spitball pitcher who gained the pinnacle of baseball's heights a generation back, died yesterday at his chicken farm in the heart of the Berkshire Hills, where he learned the game he played so well.

A heart attack brought death to the 56-year-old spitball hurler.

Happy Jack was a native of North Adams. He was developed on the sandlots of Western Massachusetts and he gained his first experience in organized baseball with the old Springfield club.

Chesbro, christened John Dwight, received the cognomen "Happy Jack" long before he joined the ranks of organized baseball. It was while he served as an attendant at the Middletown (N. Y.) insane asylum that an inmate called him "Happy Jack," and the name stuck.

TWICE LEADS LEAGUE

From the diamonds of Western Massachusetts he went to the Richmond Club of the Atlantic League and later joined the Pittsburgh Club of the National League, where he began his big league career.

While with Pittsburgh, in 1901 and 1902, he led the National League pitchers, winning 21 and losing nine games for an average of .700 in 1901 and piling up a percentage of .824 the following year with 28 victories and six defeats.

He won 14 straight games in 1904 while with the New York Highlanders, before the Red Sox, then a pennant winner, stopped him. The Boston team seemed to have a jinx on him, for he lost the pennant to the Sox in the final game of the season when he uncorked a wild pitch that let in the winning run.

ACE OF SPITBALLERS

His spitball became the talk of the baseball world, and while he was not the first hurler to use the moist delivery, he was regarded by many baseball authorities as the best.

Happy Jack's best years were spent under Clark Griffith, then manager of the Highlanders, and he stayed with the New York manager until 1909, when his arm went back on him. A short time with the Red Sox followed, and in 1924 he made his last appearance in major league baseball. For a time he helped out with the Washington Senators' pitchers under his old manager, Griffith. Then he turned to a small chicken farm in his native Berkshire Hills to spend his days of retirement.

WIRES CONDOLENCE

A message of condolence was telegraphed to Mrs. Chesbro by Barney Dreyfuss, Pirate owner, as quickly as the Pittsburgh magnate learned of the death of the former Buccaneer hurling star. The Pirate office planned to send a floral offering to the Chesbro home.

KELLY DEFEATED

WILMINGTON, Del., Nov. 7.—(AP.)—Elmer Beeman, 145½, Cincinnati, punched out a decision over Irish Johnny Kelly, 145½, Wilkes-Barre, Pa., in a one-sided eight-round bout here last night. Ray Romero, Wilmington, and Buddy Beeman, Cincinnati, fought to a six-round draw.

STORM RACE VICTOR

BALTIMORE, Nov. 7.—(AP.)—Mrs. H. Price's Storm, the public chorus, captured the fifth race, a claiming event, at a mile and 70 yards at Pimlico yesterday, but it took a vigorous ride by Pete Walls to bring the 3-year-old son of Augustus home in front.

THE LOVE TRAP -:- Story of a Girl's Struggle For Love and Happiness -:- By ROBERT TERRY SHANNON

CHAPTER XV.

Bat began preening himself. The attention he was drawing from Mary flattered him, despite her upbraiding. She was different—a higher type than the girls of his own circle. The bit of boasting he had permitted himself expanded his ego and he tried to look important. For Mary's daring gamble, his attitude was perfect.

"You needn't be worried because I'm keeping an eye on you," he stated grandly, out of the corner of his mouth. "In a way, I'm a protection to you."

"I'd be a lot safer without your protection—or Landers' protection either."

"It ain't so bad to have me following you, Miss Kennedy. If anybody says anything to you just call me and I'll bust him."

"Are those your orders?"

"No, it's just my own idea to bust anybody that bothers you."

"Well, it makes me nervous having you tagging around after me and I wish you'd quit it."

"I'm afraid it can't be helped, Miss Kennedy. For your own good. I'm sticking right behind you wherever you go—but you know that without me telling you."

Mary seemed to hesitate, as though in doubt as to her destination. "Well there's no sense in going home now because I haven't got anything to do up there," she said. "If I was to go to a movie, I suppose you'd trail me right inside."

"Sure."

A BRAGGART

She turned and started walking back to Broadway. She noted with ironic satisfaction that he fell in beside her. It was more to his fancy to walk with a pretty girl than to follow her like a dog. Her contempt rankled him, and he started talking rapidly.

"It might look to you like I'm doing a sneaky piece of work, but I couldn't turn Buck down. He sort of depends on me in everything he does—all his big deals. I'm his confidential adviser, in a way. Most of the time, he won't make a move unless I put the okay on it. Sometimes he pretends to act like I was only one of the hired hands, but that's just to throw people off the track, understand?"

She refused to feed his egotism. It was beginning to be clear that he was a fool as well as a braggart. And a liar, too—but she meant to winnow his conversation in search of the precious grains of truth.

"Rubbish! Mr. Landers doesn't tell you any of his business. What do you know about me, or Steve Moore?"

Bat threw out his chest like a pigeon. "Why, Miss Kennedy, don't you give me no credit, at all? I know the whole works—in fact, I planned it."

"Yes, you did!"

"It's a fact. I said to Buck, 'Just you keep a close eye on the girl, Buck, and everything else will be all right.' He was tickled to death with my advice, too."

"And I suppose you know where Steve is right now?" she baited him, seeringly.

"Certainly I do."

"Well, where is he?"

CONTINUES EFFORT

Bat closed one eye mysteriously. "I'm not at liberty to say. I could say—but I won't."

She tossed her head in disbelief. "Just as I thought—you're bluffing. You haven't the faintest idea where Steve is."

"I could lay my hands on him in 15 minutes," he stated profoundedly.

"Well, if you could, you wouldn't dare," she said deliberately. "You'd be too afraid of Buck Landers. What do you want to kid me for? You know you wouldn't have the nerve to tell the real truth to a girl like me. That's why Buck is your boss—because he's got more nerve."

"Is that so?" Bat demanded in a leisurely voice—but there was a stung look on his face. "Well, I don't tell everything I know."

"I don't believe you know anything about Buck's affairs."

"You'd be surprised."

What he needed, she realized, was something more to loosen his tongue. He liked to talk—he probably had the all-important information—but it would have to be dragged out of him. Yet she had made a beginning—the flood gates, she felt, had begun to give way. Somewhere in the vast scheme of things was a method, a device, to draw out the turgid current of information that he held back.

Mary felt like steel. At any risk, she had to keep Bat with her. Undoubtedly he knew something—but how much?

With guarded eyes she tried to read his face. It was incredible, but he did not even suspect that she was trying to draw him out. He was the elemental male, fatuous in conceit and stupidity. Women were smarter.

"I'm not going home now—it's too early," said Mary. "I think I'll go to a movie."

A PERFECT OPENING

But a movie, Mary decided immediately, would not serve her purpose best. It was necessary that she find a place where she could talk undisturbed with him. It was her only chance. A flash of wisdom came to help her—liquor. Yes, that was it. If he ever got to drinking his loquacious vanity might reveal all he knew. But there was another consideration—he might prove dangerous. Men of his kind were not conspicuous for their chivalry. The thought of the automatic pistol concealed in the hand bag she was carrying brought her a little tremor of confidence. But it was no time to hang back because of small perils.

"No, I'm not going to a movie," she said aloud, but not directly addressing Bat. "It's almost time for lunch. Is there a good place to eat around here, do you know?"

"Is it a good place?"

"I eat there all the time, myself. It might be a little tough for a girl like you, Miss Kennedy—but the beer sure is real."

It was a perfect opening for her purpose. She affected a little hesitation. "Well, I think I'll go around there and have lunch, but maybe I hadn't better go in there alone—if it is a tough place."

He rose to the bait slowly, but surely. "I guess maybe Buck wouldn't get sore if—I might take you in and sit down with you. Matter of protection. They know me in there. I guess there wouldn't be any harm in that, would there?"

THUG FEELS IMPORTANT

Mary found herself in a narrow basement restaurant where there were small tables covered with redcheckered cloths. A few hardlooking people were eating—they were nightbirds and this was their breakfast hour. Two or three girls, apparently from a chorus, sat in a corner and smoked while they ate. A fat man, the proprietor, conducted her and Bat to a side table.

"Beer for you?" Bat asked her, as she studied the man.

"Yes, thank you."

"Make it two," he said to the waiter.

"You needn't take beer just because I did," Mary told Bat. "If you want Scotch, go ahead and order it."

She spoke negligently. Whisky, she knew, was a quicker intoxicant than beer.

"What makes you think I like Scotch better?" Bat asked.

"Oh, I don't know—Mr. Landers seems to like Scotch, and I thought, naturally, you would too."

There was subtlety in this that put Bat on his mettle. He tried to look casual and important at the same time.

"Yeah, me and Buck usually takes Scotch. Cancel that order and make mine Scotch."

"Yes, sir," said the waiter.

Mary said nothing. She was not hungry, but she made a valiant pretense of eating. The beer at her plate was strong and bitter; she disliked it, but managed to drink half a glass. Bat ordered a second highball, and a third. Color began to rise in his pasty face.

"I guess this would hand the bunch a kick—me planted here, eating and drinking with Buck's sweetie," he beamed over the table. "Tell me something, girlie—I ain't a bad guy, am I? You like me as well as you do Buck, don't you?"

FLATTERS HIM

Mary collected all of her determination—it burned like a fierce flame in the center of her being. Now, if ever, she had to act her part.

"I like you a whole lot better than I do Buck," she said. "I think it's a shame the way he treats you. He ought to be taking orders from you—if you want my opinion."

For an intense instant she hung in suspense, while she studied his crooked face, to see if he was going to fall for this brazen flattery. He put a paw across the table and dropped it upon the back of her small, soft hand. With a shiver, she allowed the contact to remain for a moment and then, releasing her hand, she stretched it idly across the table.

"Give me a cigaret, will you?" she said, struggling to control the nervousness in her voice.

"Why certainly!" Bat said, extending a pack across the table.

If he didn't try to pet, she knew she could see it through. But the pressure of his hand on hers had given her a vile sensation, had momentarily confused her cunning. Fortunately, his conceit at the moment was greater than his sensuality; his gesture toward Mary had been half-mechanical.

"Oh, Buck's all right, I guess," Bat said with elaborate condescension.

But Mary was out to arouse his sense of injustice. "I thought you were a smarter man than that, Bat. Why, he talks to you like a servant—like a dog."

"It's just his way," Bat protested, but his voice was surly.

Mary laughed. "If he treats you that way to your face—what do you suppose he says about you behind your back?"

He rapped with his knuckles on the table for the waiter. "Bring me another Scotch. Well, what does he say about me behind my back?"

LOCATES STEVE

"I hate to tell you," Mary said. "It might hurt your feelings."

"That's gratitude!"

"Oh, well, you like it. You eat out of his hand, and as long as you keep on being that big a fool, Buck will keep on using you for a rummy."

The waiter put a bottle beside Bat. He poured himself a straight drink, and swallowed it at one tilt. Then he poured another and sat looking at it. His face appeared more crooked than ever. Before he spoke again, he lifted the glass to his slant-mouth and drained it.

"I'll show him," Bat said. His face was a repellent, sallow mask. "I'll show him something, too. To hell with Landers! Come on—let's get out of here."

He was half drunk. It certainly looked as though she was beginning to win.

"Let's go and see Steve," she said, tensely persuasive.

"Sure—unless you're afraid to take me to him."

"I ain't afraid of nothing. Nobody ain't gonna office-boy me around, and make me like it."

They left the chop house and, as soon as they reached the pavement, Mary walked to the curb with him and stopped. "Shall we get a taxi, Bat?"

"Yeah. I don't feel like walking around."

They halted a machine, and Bat mumbled an address to the driver. He sat silently beside Mary while they drove, his face smug with malicious satisfaction. He spoke aloud once to himself: "Let him boss some other guy around like a bum!"

They got out and he paid the driver with some small change. It was a shabby neighborhood.

"We'll walk a ways," Bat said stolidly. "Just walk along quiet."

They crossed another street and, at the intersection, Mary glanced up at the street signs and fixed the location definitely in her mind. Bat stopped in front of a cigar store, and lit a cigaret.

"This is as far as we go," he said. "Look across the street"—follow the houses down with your eye, till you come to that one there on the corner. See it?"

"Yes."

"That's it. It's a walk-up. You go up two flights, and back down the hall to the last door on the right. It's a flat. That's where your boy friend is."

Mary was trembling all over. "Is he all right, Bat—they haven't hurt him, have they?"

"No, they just tapped him on the head. You wrap a soft rag around the slug and it just stuns 'em, if you don't hit too hard. The boys know how."

"Is he there alone, or is somebody watching him?"

"Probably somebody is with him—how the hell should I know? But listen—I'm going to duck away from the neighborhood right now. You can do what you please. All I ask is, don't ever tip me off to Landers if anything happens. The big stiff! Well, he'll think twice again before he pans me to people, and treats me like a dirty dog. I said I'd show him, and I did. What little dough I ever got out of him never bought me any limousines."

He was beginning to move away. Mary was not loath to see him go. From now on he would be of no service. He had betrayed his chief because he had been drinking and, second, because he was a traitor at heart. But he typified the weakness of Landers. In his shady work, Buck, of necessity, had to depend upon men like Bat. Always, the lowliest henchmen had the power and, frequently, the motive to doublecross him.

"I got a chance to ride alcohol out of Philadelphia, and I'm going to take it," Bat said, boastfully. "I'm through with this town and this bunch around here. So long, kid, and I hope you put it all over that big stuffed shirt up at the Metropolis."

He went away from her, his lopsided walk keeping him close to buildings, as though he sought to avoid attention. Mary went into the tobacco store and bought a pack of cigarets. She did not smoke, as a rule, but she, too, wanted to get out of sight for a moment. When she reappeared, she was in the grasp of impatient eagerness that overwhelmed common sense.

At the back of her mind a feeble impulse of caution prompted her to find a policeman—to have him accompany her. But she had been pent up too long for such sensible procedure. An ecstacy, a wild exultation of haste burned and addled her mind. Steve was alive, was waiting for her! Her heart was beating furiously at the thought. She couldn't keep from trembling, and the throbbing engine in her breast drove her forward heedless of any danger. Everything was all right now—Steve was safe! Nobody could keep her from him—not even an army. She crossed the street and sped toward the house on the corner, her eyes glistening with excitement.

"That one on the corner," he explained.

LOVE COMES BUT ONCE
(Or, Old Rockin' Chair's Got Me)

Synopsis—With Dun-Jones Industrial Averages down to 30.3, the Yuba football team is discouraged as their coach pleads with them to finish the game with Yuba which started in last Saturday's issue.

"Crack!" 'Twas the start of the third quarter. The gun awakened the eager fans in the bleachers. Thinking the game was over, heedlessly they swept down onto the field, as the players snapped into action. In a mad saturnalia they formed a serpentine around the goal posts, in and out of huddles, helter and skelter. Freemantle Gadwall snatched a brown oval from the grasp of a stout matron, tucked it firmly beneath the rippling muscles of his arm, and sped down the field with it. On and on, ever closer came his goal line. As he crossed it, a cheer rose from many throats. But the ball picked itself up and scampered away, its tail between its legs, just as the stout matron towered above Gadwall. "Give me my Pekinese," she said, prodding him with her umbrella. Threateningly she raised her arm. . . .

Winter Comes!

The Season's First Snowfall Is An Appropriate Prelude to the Welfare Drive

Pittsburgh had its first taste of winter yesterday in the season's first snow flurry. This reminder that there lie immediately ahead months of cold weather, during which the poor will suffer acutely if not provided with fuel and warm clothing, was a fitting prelude to the Welfare and Emergency Fund campaign which gets under way next week.

The keynote of the Welfare drive will be sounded at a meeting at Syria Mosque tomorrow afternoon at which Andrew Mellon, Secretary of the Treasury, is to speak. The proceedings will be broadcast by radio for the benefit of those unable to attend, and it is to be hoped that everyone will listen. A message of great importance is to be delivered.

The pledge has been made by welfare workers that "no one in Allegheny County shall go cold or hungry this winter." Undoubtedly they express the sentiment of the public. The pledge can be fulfilled only if money is forthcoming to buy clothing and food. The $6,000,000 to be raised, of which $3,000,000 will be distributed as wages for work on public improvements, is none too much.

If the money required for poor relief is not voluntarily contributed it will be raised by taxation. The Legislature is to meet in Harrisburg Monday in special session to act on proposals that call for a variety of new taxes, the proceeds of which are to be applied to the aid of the unemployed. The new imposts at best would be a nuisance and should be avoided if possible.

In the long run it may be less expensive to contribute generously now to relief work than to let the money be raised by taxation. E. T. Stotesbury, wealthy Philadelphian, had this idea in mind in calling a meeting of 150 multimillionaires a few days ago at which he urged them to double their donations to charity. They fear a permanent state income tax. Stotesbury has given $250,000 to Philadelphia's welfare fund.

Even with the best of intentions millionaires would be unable, and should not be expected, to bear the whole burden of poor relief. Nor are they the only class that will be hard hit by the new tax proposals. The cigaret tax, for example, would take not a little money away from laborers and others little able to shoulder an additional burden.

It is not only for poor relief that higher taxation is demanded. The Education Congress, in session at Harrisburg this week, was told additional taxes would have to be levied to pay the state's school bill, which has increased from $45,349,000 in the 1921-23 biennium to $93,009,000 in the 1931-33 biennium. We cannot afford to be niggardly in our expenditures for education, yet not one cent should be spent unless the need is undeniable.

There is need for well-balanced impartial opinion as to public school and other public financial requirements. Teachers' views as to school needs are liable to be biased. Expenditures which they regard as unavoidable may present a different aspect to other observers. It is for this reason that City Council should welcome outside advice, such as trade and civic bodies offer, as to the requirements of next year's municipal budget.

Apparently satisfied that money will be forthcoming from some source, Gov. Pinchot has acted promptly to establish camps for destitute men who are to be employed by the state this winter on the improvement of township roads. It is, of course, gratifying to the people of Western Pennsylvania that the first camps are to be placed in this end of the state—one in Fayette and one in Washington County. No one can accuse Pinchot of lacking energy.

Reasonably prompt release of the millions of dollars of deposits held by closed banks is another thing which would help people in straitened circumstances to get through the winter with a minimum of discomfort. Appointment of C. L. McCune to further this purpose is a step forward. Secretary Gordon, of the State Banking Department, is moving with commendable celerity in this matter.

Every effort should be made to get a generous portion of these "frozen deposits" into circulation before Christmas. The addition of several million dollars to the amount to be spent in Pittsburgh on holiday shopping will directly or indirectly benefit everyone in the community. It is to be hoped that everyone who is able will adhere this year to the usual American standard of Christmas giving. Only 41 more shopping days remain, by the way.

In the interest of a more equitable distribution of jobs Judges Patterson and Swearingen discharged from the Returning Board yesterday a clerk who it was learned was also on the city payroll. Their action will be approved. There are too many unemployed men in the county—60,000, it is estimated—to permit one man already assured of a steady income to take another public job requiring no special ability.

Worse than holding two jobs on which work is really performed is the holding of a salaried public position that calls for nothing more than signing the payroll. There are said to be a number of such sinecures, given to politicians as a reward for their services to the machine. The people are counting on C. C. McGovern and C. M. Barr, as majority County Commissioners, to prune the payroll of such "dead timber."

McGovern and Barr will be expected, however, not to dismiss from the employ of the county hard-working, honest and efficient men and women of the rank and file for no other reason than that they supported their opponents. Many of these employes were forced into political activity against their will. Even laborers were compelled to solicit votes under threat of the loss of their jobs.

On the eve of the Welfare Drive the Sunday Sun-Telegraph will present in full color in the Gravure Section a reproduction of the official Welfare poster—a picture of an angel of mercy with drawn sword holding at bay death and pestilence. There will also be other pictures in color, including a copy of an attractive "Spring Landscape" by Francis Speight which is on display in the Carnegie Institute international exhibition of paintings.

Another noteworthy feature of the Sunday Sun-Telegraph will be the initial installment of "Life and Letters of Woodrow Wilson," by Ray Stannard Baker, compiled from 200,000 letters and documents. Mr. Baker's narrative will be published only in the Sunday paper. It deserves the attention of every student of modern history, and is entertaining to the general reader as well.

"I Knew Him When"

Sighs Uncle Sam: "I knew him when
He was the sturdiest of men;

By Claude G. Bowers

In the midst of the ballyhoo of the administration apologists concerning Mr. Hoover's "triumph" in the conversations with Laval of France it must be a bit disconcerting to read of the rapturous reception accorded that clever little statesman on his return to Paris. Americans who have been reading the propaganda stuff of administration organs will wonder why M. Laval should have been given the greatest ovation seen in Paris since the Armistice Day march of Foch in 1918. As the alleged victim of Mr. Hoover's cleverness appeared the great throngs on the boulevards shouted and screamed in a frenzy of enthusiasm:

"Vive Laval! Vive Jose! Vive La Paix!"

And M. Laval was all smiles. His friends now feel that he has a long lease on official life. And that must puzzle Americans who prayerfully read the propoganda of administration organs. What happened in Washington between M. Laval and Mr. Hoover to explain this feeling in France that Laval in those conversations has scored the greatest triumph of any French statesman since the war? Surely, something must have happened.

"France Will Keep the Faith"

A little is indicated in the statement given out by the happy warrior of France, taking home the bacon, when he said:

"Primarily, the conversations resulted in mutual agreement for consultation before political action in the future. This will permit France liberal action in Europe . . . I want to assure Americans that France will keep the faith."

There is no mistaking the meaning of these words. Mr. Hoover and the American bankers were so deficient in the qualities of statesmanship that they did not consult France on the "Hoover Moratorium." The ordinary politician would have known better. That is one of the reasons we would prefer to entrust our political fortunes to the keeping of a trained politician. The result was that France sat back and folded her hands—and we waited. And during the wait much damage was done in Germany.

M. Laval's statement shows that in the conversations, so glowingly interpreted by the bread and butter apologists of the administration, Mr. Hoover was given to understand that hereafter France, not the United States, would assume the leadership in such matters; and that Mr. Hoover surrendered, both for himself and the American bankers. In other words, the leadership has gone to France. We have enlisted under her flag.

"Vive Laval! Vive Jose! Viva La Paix!"

The United States Will Lose All

But what does M. Laval mean by assuring us that he will keep faith with us? What faith? What was the understanding? Americans have long since ceased to look to White House statements for the full news of an event. But M. Laval is far more frank and forthright with his people. He tells us something of the agreement made.

"France is willing to go far. She asks only the loyal efforts of Germany. If it is decided that the reparations burden is too great, France is willing to converse in an effort to reduce all inter-governmental debts."

Willing, no doubt, for the United States to have the privilege of scaling down the debts due her own people again; and even willing to accept a cancellation from us. Greater love hath no man. Of course, M. Laval hastens to say there can be no scaling down of the German payments to France and Belgium for the material damages of the war. Thus France will lose nothing, and the United States will lose all. Does that explain the mirth in the boulevards of Paris? The French have a sense of humor, and M. Laval has a dry humor of his own. As Lawrence Sterne said in his "Sentimental Journey" years ago, "They do these things better in France."

"Vive Laval! Vive Jose! Vive La Paix!"

Points on Which Laval Did Not Surrender

Thus the real effect of the Hoover-Laval conversations is to transfer world leadership to France; we are the mere commissary of the international arm—we pay the bills. Alphonse is France and Gaston is France. We are merely the sheepish-looking spectator on the curb watching the exchange of courtesies between Alphonse and Gaston. Mr. Hoover is not going to lead the world any more; the American bankers are not going to lead any more. France is going to lead. But M. Laval tells us that he will "keep faith" with the Americans.

He will keep faith by discussing reparations with Germany; and then he is "willing to converse" with us about more scaling down of the debts and even about cancellation. We gather that M. Laval must have surrendered to Mr. Hoover on that point.

But there were points on which he did not surrender. He did not agree that France shall lose a penny; and did not yield the fraction of an inch on French armament. He got much and he lost nothing. That is statesmanship; that is the statesmanship of a man trained in politics and not in the manufacture of pig iron or in the manufacture of Mississippi bubbles that burst.

And so M. Laval was greeted on the sidewalks of Paris with the blaring of bands, smiles, shouts and cries of—

"Vive Laval! Vive Jose! Vive La Paix!"

Why France Is Prosperous

It seems a reasonable assumption that the American bankers may not be so happy in the end as they hoped to be. Political power passes from them to the politicians of Paris—clever politicians, much more clever than the bankers. When Mr. Hoover assumed the management of the world it was well, for do not the bankers control Mr. Hoover absolutely? Now that the "conversations" in Washington have transferred the management to France they retire to the back benches; for France is not so much interested in them. Laval is interested in France. It does seem a pity that here we have no leaders in the seats of the mighty who are interested in America—first.

And so the bargain is that we shall pay the debts of the 14 nations by putting the burdens on the taxpayers of America; M. Laval promises to "keep faith" and get busy with the preliminaries at once.

The latest report is that we face a deficit of $2,000,000,000; but that is nothing—the bowed backs of the American people can stand much.

Meanwhile France with budget balanced, the people prosperous, the farms paying profits, the factories booming, continues to look after her own people. That is one of the reasons that France is prosperous and we are prostrate.

We Salute Laval's Genius

We do not write in bitterness against Laval—We salute his genius and his robust devotion to his country. He has scored one of the great diplomatic triumphs of the decade. Hoover, negotiating with Laval, recalls Lord Bulwer negotiating with Clayton. In both cases the visitor carried away the piano and we did not notice it until they were gone. It were foolish to complain of Bulwer and Laval; they were serving their country and doing a fine job. Just as a sporting proposition, had we been with the crowd on the boulevards we might, despite the picking of our pocket, have joined in the shout:

"Vive Laval! Vive Jose! Vive La Paix!"

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—The director of a school of journalism in the South wants me to explain in detail how I go about writing a column, told simply so that in reading it to the class each student will understand. "Tell all from the time you arise until the column is finished," he asks.

All ready, professor? Larry, turn the crank! At exactly sun up the butler tiptoes into the bedroom and with a tack hammer we keep at the side of the bed swats me smack on the glabella. That's the smooth part of the forehead right between the eyebrows.

It never fails to awaken me, although for the rest of the day I'm only conscious in spots. If I am not half-stunned this way every morning I turn out such brilliant stuff it endangers the jobs of other columnists. Thus my jot toward warding off unemployment.

After a shower, shaving and my trapeze work I go to breakfast. Incidentally, around the house I always walk on all fours. One of the most important contributions to a columnist's well being is his food and how eaten. He should have a galvanized trough by all means.

A wooden trough is especially dangerous. While eating, many of them often, absent-mindedly, begin gnawing into the wood and before you know it are wind suckers, just like horses. For this reason quite a number are unjustly known as windy soandsos.

A columnist's breakfast should be prepared by an expert dietician. Fresh salmon chopped up with bird seed is a good combination, but never water. Water is likely to make him brachycephalic or fat-headed. And avoid all sweets.

Eating candy for breakfast has given many columnists the appearance of having a slight dash of sissy. After breakfast a columnist should be taken out to the garden to pick daisies. Preferably daisies, but if out of season any wild flower will do. Except hollyhocks.

After daisy picking comes the tatting home work. It may sound silly, but tatting is what has given our profession its great powers of concentration. Before I began to tat I would write a column that showed no coherency at all—just scattered words with absolutely no meaning. That was 10 years ago. Now look. And quit shoving me around, you big stiff.

* * *

Sometimes I think my success is due to tatting. While others of my galloping guild are rushing to swell cafes, first nights, night clubs and dawn sandwich parlors, what have I been doing? Haven't you heard? Just sitting around the house in a faded old wrapper tatting. I've got so I can rock and tat at the same time. As a matter of fact—and I know I'll be accused of bragging—on clear days I can not only rock and tat, but I can hum to boot. There may be other rock-tat-hummers in the world, but what of it?

When the columnist has perked up his concentration—it ought to register at least 67 Mountain Time—he should be ready to tackle his column. To do one's best columnar work a dark room is essential. Columnists are attracted by glittering objects, such as bright bits of ribbon, striped candy, or toy balloons.

There are obscure columnists who are chin cuppers. That is, instead of concentration, they dawdle in an aura of mind wondering with chins cupped in their hands. That is responsible for many being chinless wonders with projecting teeth. Also slouching around in a chair that way is hard on the fibula. And no columnist can go very far without a fibula. He might as well have a shoddy calvarium as a frazzled fibula. Sometimes I think it is even better. But that's a layman's opinion and I don't care anyway.

* * *

Oh, yes, about turning out the column. The thing to do is to keep sitting at the typewriter and pecking away. If you are lucky you may turn out a batch of devastating stuff such as this. Or would you rather I'd do one of my screaming impersonations? Any way, make up your mind for I must be off to join my regiment at daybreak.

Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

Welcome Deception

This modern passion for "TRUTH" makes me tired. It is all hooey! Nobody loves the bitter truth—and for a perfectly good reason.

The worst enemy you can have is the honest soul who destroys your illusions about yourself and fills you with an inferiority complex. And the best friend you can have is the cheerful liar, who tells you "you're great," gives you courage and puts you in tune with life.

Perhaps it's just a complex, but I never hate a cheerful liar—and I just love a graceful one!

I hate the artist who draws an "honest likeness" of me—and I love the photographer who uses his skill and his imagination to make me look like a prize beauty. HE'S the artist!

I hate the first man who confessed that he had lied to me. Why couldn't he have gone right on lying—and left me my illusions?

* * *

I hate the people who tell me that filet-of-sole is nothing but glorified flounder, and that pate-de-fois gras is made by torturing geese. They spoil my appetite.

* * *

Also the people who insist on informing me that my favorite movie star always uses a "double" for the thrilling feats.

I hate the woman who tells me that I'm not the type for the new clothes. Why can't she say that they make me look "cute" or younger or snappier—and let me go on dreaming?

I hate the biographers who tell the cruel truth about my favorite historical heroes and heroines, their little foibles and sordid domestic squabbles, their human weaknesses and pettinesses. I need my ideals to live by. And what do I care how many baths they took, what forks they used and how many women they fooled?

I hate the pessimists who assure me that there's no such thing as brotherly love, or world peace, or honest men, or good women, or happy marriages, or genuine buttermilk—or Paradise!

* * *

I hate the people who rob me of my vanity, my illusions, my faith and my dreams! Why can't they let me go on fooling myself—and being happy?

* * *

I don't hate the people who DECEIVE me. I hate people who are forever trying to UNdeceive me. I hate the Know-It-Alls! They make me TIRED!!

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

The marshes lay a few miles back of the town where I was born, quite hidden from the roads I knew.

The town was sprawled along a sunny hill, above a bright blue bay. The hill was yellow...yellow as an orange...with red and white houses scattered like confetti... and gray-green groves of olives and figs...and tall, dim files of eucalyptus, blue as smoke. Everything hot and bright, drenched in color and sun—steeped in the perfume of roses and heliotrope, and the tall white lilies, growing thick in the tangled grass, where all day long the bees buzzed and the meadow larks rose and sank in a bubble of song.

A gay hill. A gay little town, with the tides sweeping in, clean air and salt from the ocean, and the barges coming and going, loaded with fruit and grain. And, hidden behind all this brightness and movement, the miles of dark, silent marshes.

I remember the first time I saw them, as a little child, riding with my father into the back country. It was a winter day, but warm and sweet, as Californian winters are. I had been jumping in and out of the old buckboard, gathering wild flowers. My hands were filled with butter cups and poppies. Suddenly the road swung around an unfamiliar turn...and the brightness was all blotted out.

There lay the marshes, stretching endlessly, dark and silent, with the fog rolling in upon them. From them there came a cold, sickly stench . . . and a low, ceaseless moaning that seemed to grope and fumble, like a presence moving through the darkness.

A dreadful place. I had never seen anything like it before. I did not know that such a place could lie behind the sunny hills. Terrified, I clung to my father.

"I want to go home!" I whimpered.

But he only smiled and held me close, with a deep understanding in his kind eyes. And so we went ahead, into the fog, across the marshes.

And in time I, too, learned to smile when I came to the marshes. For, though they never ceased to seem strange and apart from the happy world, they lost their horror. I found they had a great beauty all their own. Even the fog was lovely, with its trailing gray veils—its pearly, opalescent banks. And when the fog lifted, the marshes spread brilliant as a peacock's tail, blue and jade and bronze, with the sloughs running through them in a network of silver . . . between great, phosphorescent patches of slime, rust and mauve.

And at night, when the moon hung in a great, pale bubble above that vast, quiet place, there was a mystery and peace there as in no other place on earth.

Often, going on through years, I have thought back to those marshes, treasuring their memory the more as my sense of beauty deepens. And I have come to see how like they are to that other strange, lonely place which lies waiting in every life . . . the dark, salt acres of sorrow.

For we come to sorry as I came to the marshes—ignorant, laughing children, with wild flowers in our hands. Then, of a sudden, the brightness is gone . . . and there is only darkness and horror and a low, ceaseless moaning.

Terror overcomes us and we cry to go home . . . back again, across that sunny hill to the place where life was easy and safe and sweet. But we cannot go back. We can never be the same again when once the road has brought us to the desolate marshes of grief—and we cry in rebellion—in pain.

And so we go on together, into the fog, across the marshes—

And presently the fog lifts. And though we still are lonely we see that there is beauty in this place . . . and secret tides of strength . . . and a strange glory of endurance . . . and lovely, silvery peace.

ISN'T IT SO?

Some girls are so vivacious that they give the impression their sole and exclusive diet consists of Mexican jumping beans.

In some homes, clocks as well as families never agree.
